Memories Of People: Pages of Life

When you look through this yearbook, we hope you'll remember its fond memories. You will recall the people that made up Elmhurst; your friends, teachers, and principal. You'll also remember the bustling halls and the names of a few of the common celebrities such as Kevin "Stinky" Stephenson, Dave "Pork" Campbell, and Dave "High-tide" Esterline who made the year a little more interesting. You were individuals by yourself, or in some sort of club or organization. Whether it be Junior Achievement, Jazz Band, or American Field Service, you enjoyed yourself in every activity offered here at Elmhurst. Remember us as we'll remember you, captured in these few pages of life.

News Briefs

WASHINGTON (AUG. 8, 1974)—President Richard M. Nixon resigned from his office of the presidency. He gave reasons of pressure due to Watergate and the accusation of his guilt in the cover-up.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 9, 1974)—Vice President Gerald Ford was sworn in at the inauguration ceremony at the White House as the 38th president of the United States.

SAUDI ARABIA (JUNE, 1974)—The Saudi Arabian government levied an embargo that drastically cut oil exports to the United States and other foreign countries. The prices per barrel doubled and gas prices rose with them.

Memorial Caliseum was finally reopened to rock concerts after being closed several months due to smoking laws. The first concert held was the BeeGees. They were followed by others such as Seals and Crafts, Joe Walsh, Daobie Brothers, Eagles, and Wishbone Ash.

WASHINGTON (DECEMBER, 1974)—Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York was accepted by Congress as the vice president of the United States. After several weeks of hearings and investigation because of his wealth, Congress voted. It became the first time in history when neither the president nor the vice president had been voted into office by the people.

WASHINGTON (JANUARY 1, 1975)—The Watergate trials finally ended as the jury convicted four of the defendants. Those convicted were John Mitchell, H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, and Robert Mordian. Kenneth Parkinsan was found not guilty.

SALT TALKS—President Ford briefs congressional leaders for the agreement.

NOW HE HAS EVERYTHING—Taking the oath, Governor Nelson Rockefeller is sworn in for the vice presidency.

TURN AROUND—Senior photographer Mike Duray is caught resting between shots.

WOW!—Catching a few eyes, seniors Dan Avery and Mickey Bodigan tool the parking lot a bit and stop to talk to seniors Paul Frankewich and Randy Smith and sophomore Tod Huntley.

GET DOWN AND BOOGIE—Shoes off, senior Wendy Keim gets into some fast dancing at the Christmas dance.

HUMM, HUMM, BANG!—Directed by sophomore Matt Tyler, the powder puff band raises hell but no pep. Kozzoos: Seniors Bev Free and Phil Rockstroh, sophomores Tod Huntley and Donno Munroe. Drums: Sophomore Sue Frankewich. Cymbals: Senior Cathy Cary.

"HOW DOST THOU GO, SIR HIPPIE?"—Masquerading as a knight, senior Barb Bowen discusses some points of a game to junior Mott Cary as senior Kathy Weber listens.

HA! HA! HA!—Getting together for some laughs, seniors Bev Free, Leslie Raymer, Kathy Weber, and Beth Harris admire each other's costumes.

A FEW HOLIDAY SPIRITS—Junior Carol Quonce tips the jug of a football game.

NO BITING, NO PUNCHING, NO KICKING...—Joined by several Bishop Luers players, seniors Reggie Hill and Dave Bayer listen to instructions from the referee.

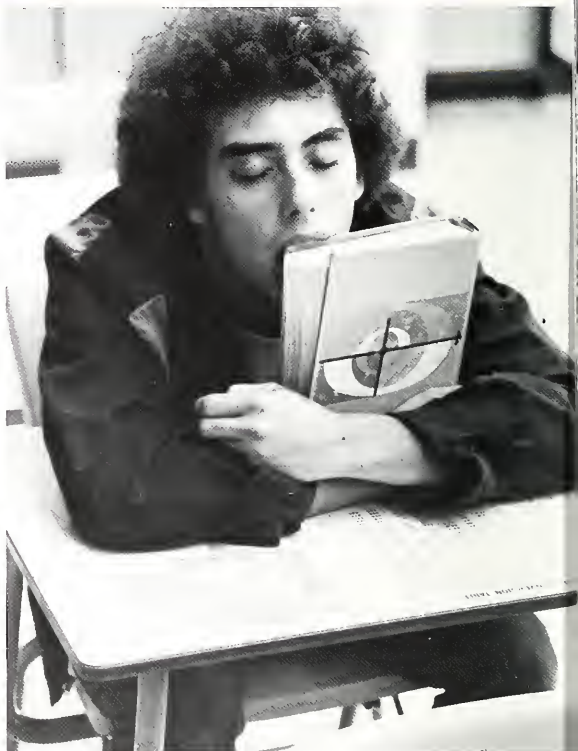

To Each His Own: Individual Expression

REALLY TRYING TO SINK HIS TEETH INTO CALCULUS?—Senior Chuck Lord gets caught napping in Mr. Poor's class.

GETTING INTO THE SPIRIT—Decorating the courtyard tree is like writing a good story to senior Mike Arnold, juniors Sarah Stewart and Barb Harman, seniors Wendy Keim and Marie Zacher of the newspaper staff. The tree added a little brightness to the season.

CAN YOU GUESS WHO IS BEHIND THE DRUMS?—Preparing to march onto the field, junior David Beutler, senior Dan Schory and sophomores Tam Cross adjust their drums.

Homecoming Week:

Gimmick Days Bolster Spirit

Do you remember back in '74 during Homecoming Week—all those weird, crazy dress days that promoted school spirit? How about that first day when the guys looked super sharp in jackets and ties, the girls in their Sunday glad rags. And it took a lot of nerve to let down your cool for a day to grease your hair back or wear a tight ponytail. But when more than half of the school showed up the next day ready for a sock hop or a cruise down Main Street, spirit started building. Sucker day gave you a chance to beat those before-lunch hunger pains. But somehow, after 17 suckers, those little pieces of candy on a stick could curl your tongue.

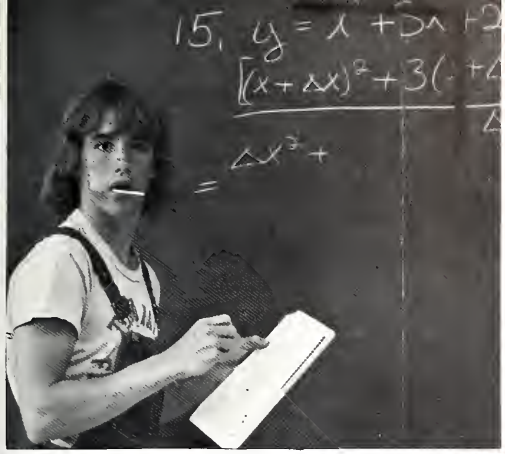

Then finally, a day to show off that prize pair of blue jeans that took five years to reach perfection. Tramp day, or "Wear Those Grubbies That Mom Threatened to Burn Day," had to be the most successful. All normal American kids were affected by the "Disease" and transformed overnight into "The Untouchables." As for the teachers, many echoed these words, "That had to be the longest week I've ever been through."

Homecoming Spirit Rises Despite Rain and Defeat

Honking horns, balloons, signs, and crepe paper filled the atmosphere . . . marching band members boarded the buses . . . the football team danned their gear . . . all in preparation for the Homecoming climax: the football game.

Not even the drizzle and game score could douse spirit as the court assembled at half-time and senior Sara Hoopingarner was crowned Homecoming Queen. Enthusiastic applause accompanied the awarding of trophies for the best floats: the American Field Service Club and the Senior Class.

Although the faotball game may climax Homecoming, it's the student participation and spirit that makes it fun, win or lose.

Quoy Howell, reigning Homecoming Queen, crowns the new queen, Sara Hoopingarner.

Senior Marcio Starks talks confidentially to a radiant Sara Hoopingarner.

Among other gag gifts, senior Melita Krieger presents senior Derek Paris with a Hershey's Kiss.

Foreign exchange students, Corinne Bucher and Ansa Kunnari, represent the American Field Service on its winning float, "Time for a Victory."

Junior Melissa Hunter holds a strand of balloons to be put on a car in the coronation.

The senior float, "Blast 'em," won the award for the best class float and best overall float.

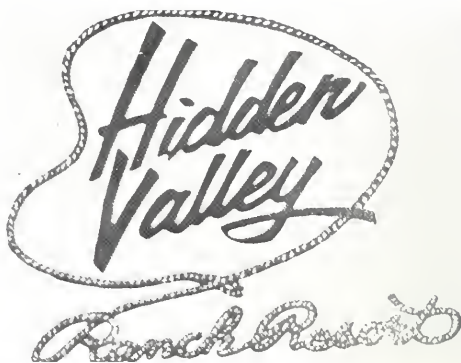

Musicians Mix Preparation Along With Recreation At:

"Be out of bed at 6:00!" . . . and ready to tromp around a football field, cram routines into your head, march, and play music, all while your stomach growls and your mind is still asleep. After an hour of this, it's time to run in for breakfast and out again for three more hours of drills. Or to the music room for La La La, Ho Ho Ho warm-ups. Dedication? They must be crazy, you say. And they are—crazy about music.

The Marching Band and Trojan Singers took a week of their precious vocation and sacrificed it to their cause. They worked their tails off during rehearsals, but reaped a few benefits between times. With a swimming pool, horseback riding, gameroom, and three hot meals daily, Hidden Valley Ranch Resort in Kentucky proved to be a huge improvement over the asphalt parking lot—band camp and smashed sack lunches. Proof of their efforts was evident when the Trojan Singers performed for several organizations and when the band marched football shows. Even without those successful results, it was worth it just to hear the mumbled praise of Mr. Brugh, "You guys did a good job."

Wearing grubbies, hats, and shades, the marching band members stand while practicing a new marching arrangement.

Heat beat with tired feet, junior Kim Markey rests on the sidewalk to remove her shoes.

And there it is, after a lot of hard work, sore feet, and perspiration: a finished product.

Girls Play Game Rough and Tough Despite Their 'Powder-Puff' Title

When the senior girls challenged the juniors to a "powder-puff" football game, a frantic campaign started to recruit sponsors, coaches, and players. Although it was flag, the girls trained as if it were tackle. Bumping elbows and knocking knees, they practiced in all kinds of weather. After a few injuries and a lot of laughs, the teams were ready for November 12.

The game even warranted a last period pep-assembly. Here the teams were introduced and the girls exchanged gag gifts. Then it was out to field for the confrontation. Cheered on by the male cheerleaders, both teams fought hard and rough for a victory. The junior girls didn't let the 22-6 senior victory get them down though, and started plotting for next year's revenge.

Junior and senior girls exchange token gifts at the pep-assembly preceding the game.

"My Three Angels" Captivates Audience With Devilish Humor

JOSEPH: Adolphe!

JULES: Of course!

JOSEPH: An inspiration! Quick, humanitarian, and safe!

Adolphe is, of course, the pet poisonous snake of three French convicts confined to the jungles of French Guiana, who team up to aid the Ducotel family in the Elmhurst production of Sam and Bella Spewack's "My Three Angels." The convicts, in a sort of Robin Hood style, save the family from rich Uncle Henri (Adolphe "conveniently" bites him) who is planning to take away the small business that Felix Ducotel has botched.

The ten-member cast, along with director Donald Goss and his assistant directors Shelley Wellington and Jennifer Manth, rehearsed for two months before the opening performance in November. The stagecraft class and other student volunteers helped to make the show a success by working backstage on lights and sound, and constructing the set.

The convicts arrange for Poul and Marie Louise to meet after Uncle Henri has gone to bed.

Felix Ducotel tries to explain his unruly bookkeeping to Uncle Henri.

Arcade Antics Fun

"Will the student council meeting please come to order?! First on the agenda, we must decide on a fund-raising project. Any ideas?"

"This is just off the top of my head; but what about an Elmhurst first annual, student council-sponsored, post-football season, pre-basketball season, everybody welcome, y'all come, city-wide, penny arcade?"

"Would you run that past me again?"

"The Elmhurst first annual, student council-sponsored . . ."

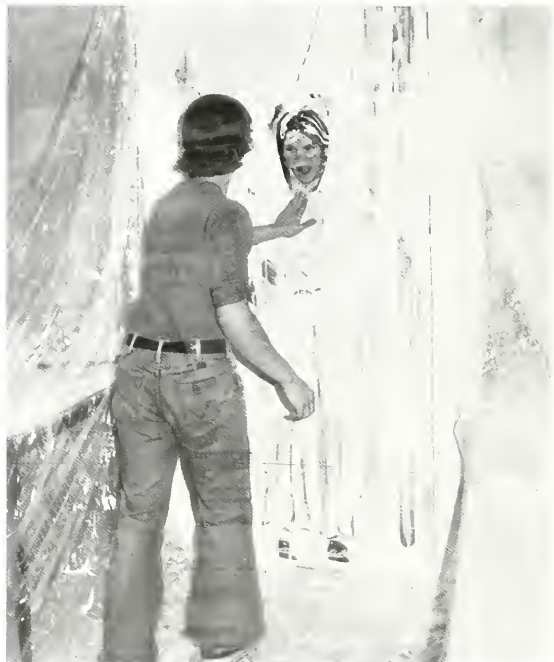

"Skip that part. Wasn't there something in there about an arcade?"

And so it was, the Elmhurst 1st Annual Penny Arcade was born.

Senior Paul Fronkewich restocks the Coke bottles for the next customer of the student council ring toss.

Peering from his coffin of unsuspecting victims, junior Jim McCleneghen portrays the Quill and Scroll Club's vampire.

Senior Nancy Raney "clowns" for the American Field Service by selling grob bags.

The Elmhurst Jazz Festival

Featuring:

The Elmhurst Jazz Festival, which originated in 1970, is fast becoming a school and music department tradition. The program has widened to include a college performance night, a day for high school competition, and an evening featuring a guest artist.

This sixth annual festival included college groups from Indiana State University, I.U./Purdue, University of Michigan, Ball State University, and a local group Synergy. Featured Saturday night was Maynard Ferguson and his Orchestra.

Senior Ed Peters does his "own thing" on the Thad Jones chart "Dedication."

Thad Jones' "It Only Happens Every Time" features junior Diane Lupke on flute.

As the host band, Elmhurst's 3:00 Jazz Band performed both Friday and Saturday night.

Junior Verne Myers interweaves melody line with improvisation in Ray Brown's chart "Is There Anything Still There?"

College Night . . .

A former Elmhurst student, Ken Rorick, plays Fender Rhodes piano for his own group Synergy and the I.U. / Purdue Jazz Ensemble. Lower photo shows Mr. Brugh presenting Ken with the Elmhurst Jazz Festival keyboard soloist award.

Drummer John "The Baron" Von Ohlen performs as a guest soloist with the Elmhurst 3:00 Jazz Band.

Dave Sapp, an Elmhurst student teacher, is featured on trumpet with the Indiana State University Jazz Band.

High School Competition . . .

In addition to the competition for honor and sweepstakes bands, high school day is an educational experience. This year Maynard Ferguson and members of his orchestra held clinics for the competing bands.

Judges John Von Ohlen, Rev. Wiskirchen, and Dave Sporny take a break in between performances. Junior Debbie Redman serves as a judge's secretary.

The North Side Wildsiders with director Ed King (center) rally around their Sweepstakes trophy.

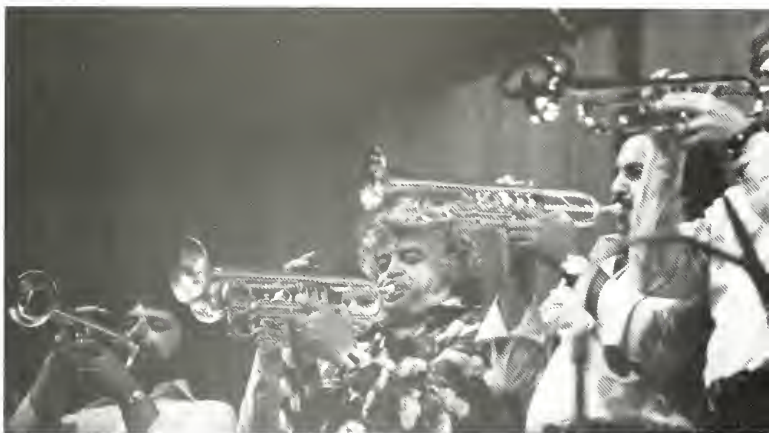

Junior Mike Saccomano solos with the 8:00 Jazz Band.

Although the Elmhurst 3:00 Jazz Band, acting as the host school, does not compete, Mr. Brugh enters the 8:00 Jazz Band on an equal basis with other high schools in Indiana.

'75 Prom

Prom Court: Anne Watters, Kim Yarman, Jan Forriss, Melissa Hunter, Anso Kunnari, Bonnie Bunn, Lori Rietdorf.

It was a magical moment indeed when in the 14th floor penthouse of the Sheraton Hotel, Elmhurst's exchange student from Finland, Ansa Kunnari, was crowned Prom Queen for 1975. The magic didn't end there though, for it transformed the regular high school crowd into a group of formally attired ladies and gentlemen. But at the stroke of midnight, the formals and tuxedos turned into the old jeans and T-shirts. It was time to forget the formal manners and go after-prom party hopping.

All decked out in white, Kirk Paris and Pam Meeks chat between dances.

Unique Methods Used

Teachers of the classroom make it what it is and the methods used are all different. Here at Elmhurst the three foreign language teachers, Jean Perega, Ofelia Herrera, and Michael Rathe, are each unique.

Miss Perega uses a system in which Spanish words known to the class are used to define new words. This enables the students to learn the structure of sentences and the use of the words in sentences.

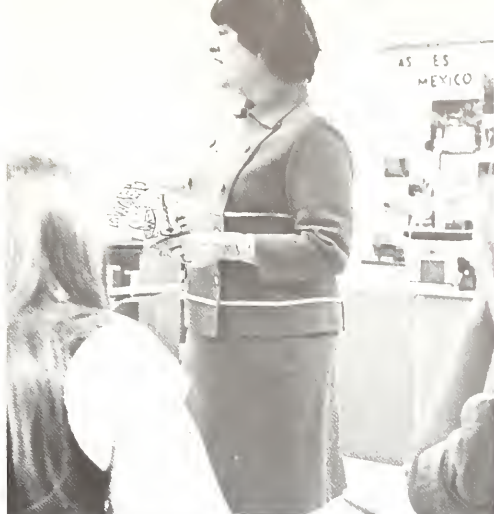

On a trial basis, Mrs. Herrera is using something new. Her fourth year class is working in individual study. Hopefully the students will learn on their own, not by the teacher's lecture.

Drilling to achieve perfection is used by Mr. Rathe as a method of teaching his French and German classes; this as well as individual study works for him.

Student involvement in the class is one thing all teachers look for. This year they formed a program that got the students involved in the class and enabled them to learn more about foreign countries' customs. The occasion was that of Christmas. The students got together for a party where customs of France, Germany, and Spain were represented.

Science Students Get Involved

"Mr. Carrier uses the Law of Yellow Buses."

"You can relate biology to life and things around you."

"It's really cool studying the stars."

"Mr. Carrier's roll of toilet paper."

"Finding out about how cells make everything living live."

"Ecology has opened my eyes to the problems facing us."

"Physics helps me develop my concentration."

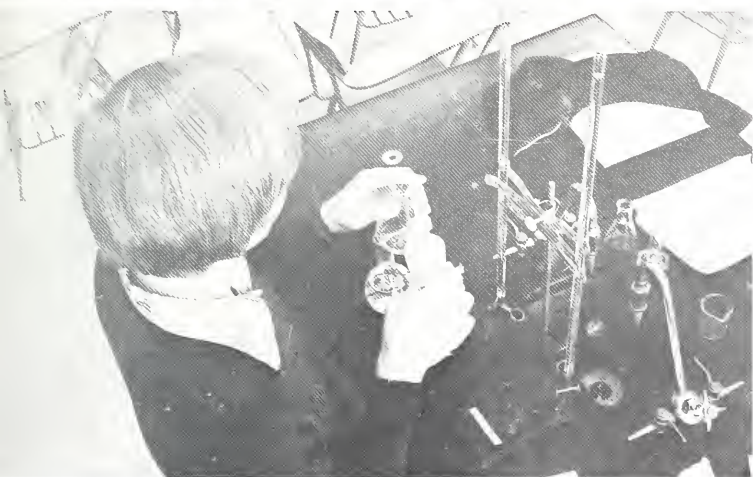

"We dissect a lot and try to observe living organisms through a microscope."

The life in science rooms is rarely boring. Although book work must be done, many activities also take place. These activities include lab work, guest speakers, and field trips.

In lab, activities were done such as mock operations, chromosome observations, and dissecting of pigs, rats, etc.

Several field trips were planned for the year. The trips included Lutheran Hospital pathology department by biology students and Hodell Acres by ecology students in the fall. In the spring, trips were made to Fox Island, Wayne Planetarium, the disposal plant, the water filtration plant, and the water pollution control plant.

Studying People

"Taking the class wasn't like refreshing your memory on something you already know like biology."

"Mr. Werling doesn't stick to the book when he talks, he throws in a little inside or trivia stories about the chapter we're studying."

"There's a lot of healthy class participation."

"It gives you a background of your America in the past, present, and future."

"Mr. Herman lets you say how you feel."

"Tobacco, Alcohol, and Narcotics has helped me quit drinking."

"Cuss & Discuss Day"

"I really understand it, what it's doing for me."

"I'm learning more about the government, that I didn't know before. I'm beginning to care."

"Psychology makes you stop and think about what you do and why."

"Interesting class discussions. We use our minds, not the book."

"It's interesting to study people and our government."

Better understanding of people and the world they live in was the route social studies students took. Through class discussion and lectures our government and American heritage was made a closer part of the students' lives. Cuss & Discuss Day gave Mr. Werling's U.S. history students a chance to voice their feelings and complaints on different subjects pertaining to social studies. Guest speakers added an outside touch showing careers that concern social studies.

Mr. Herman's tobacco, alcohol and narcotics class took part in group discussions of the harm that these substances can cause. Some of the students were relating their own experiences to the class, not just something they had read.

Freedom for Students

"Freedom"

"Art opened my eyes to self-expression."

"There are always ways of expressing yourself."

"You do what you like."

"You do things you like to do and work at your own speed."

Art students strived to live a better life through their artwork. A smooth and rough theme in clay sculpture was compared to life's good and bad. Interesting subjects were portrayed by interesting texture.

Minimal painting, acrylic painting without gesture, was the geometric style used greatly in Mr. Goss' art classes.

Offset printing was used for various school projects such as the program for "In White America." The Jazz Festival program was also designed and prepared by the art department. T-shirts were printed with yearbook cover designs and "My Three Angels" decorations to promote sales.

Painting, sculpture, fabric design and photography were all entered by Elmhurst art students in the scholastic contest; Gold Key finalists were John Seabold and Marty Petit.

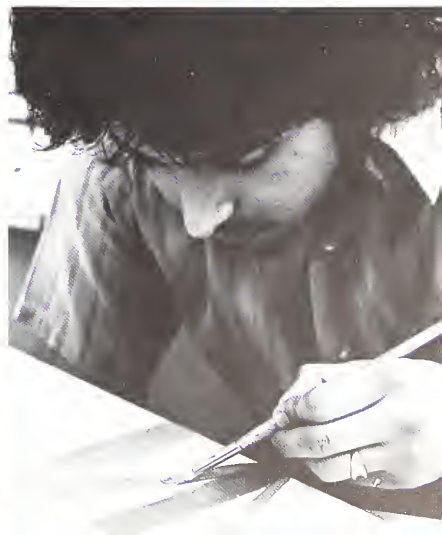

Stagecraft built lifelike sets for the school play, "My Three Angels," and worked out the various aspects of movie making.

RVC Offers Experiences, Future Career Potential

"It's offered more than anything at Elmhurst."

"RVC is very useful if you plan on going into different fields of horticulture as a career."

"Really fantastic when you can work in the field you plan to go into later on."

Vacational training through the Fort Wayne Regional Center included areas of interest for both girls and boys. Students spent one half day at Elmhurst, their "home" school, studying the required courses, and the remaining half day at the Regional Center at on-the-job training.

Occupational programs varied from constructional crafts, automobiles and electronics to food service, beauty culture, child care, horticulture and data processing. Students were awarded up to three credits per semester for successful performance in these programs.

Opportunities such as these bring future possibilities such as entrance into apprentice training, further post-high school training or automatic employment after high school.

Home Ec Teaches Life After High School

"I'm learning a lot about people, why some things happen to them and how."

"Human development and consumer education show and tell what to be careful about."

"Human development helps you meet certain situations in life."

"In housing you get to design your own house."

"Human development teaches all about the major things in life and what's important and how it will affect me."

"Human development taught me about raising a family and being around people."

"Clothing will save me money and I will have a skill at it."

"I want to learn to sew better. In human development I am learning more about the life of children."

"You get to learn different things about sewing and the machine."

"In consumer education they were teaching about what to expect when you get out of school."

This year's home economics classes were not all cooking and sewing and not only for girls. Housing classes tried their hand at interior design and planning house layouts. Learning the ins and outs of economical buying was emphasized in the consumer education class.

Cakes were decorated and complete meals were prepared by the foods classes. Proper nutrition and cooking fundamentals interested the boys in the class as much as the girls.

Fashions created by sewing class students were displayed in King's Department Store. The girls received the material for the outfits free for providing the store with a display.

Students Form a Family Unit

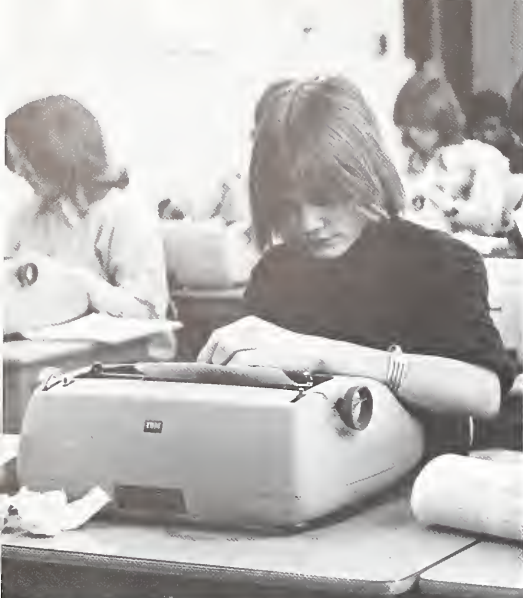

"We have concerts, go on exciting tours to other cities, and marching band camps. It's so exciting to be involved in music."
"Bloody Monday in band gives you the courage and initiative to want to be a better player."
"I enjoy it so I'll work at it."
"Jazz Band has given me something that I love to do plus I can use it in college and as a career."
"Mr. Brugh knows what he is doing."
"It's a chance to express myself through music."
"Concert Band helps me understand the feeling of music better."
"We all work together every day to become a good band."
"I liked marching band. It was fun and ya' got plenty of exercise."

Involvement in music is more than just one hour five days a week of sitting in a classroom. Jazz Band, Concert Band, Orchestra, Concert Choir and Trojan Singers all worked each day preparing for their next concert.

Courses for developing musical skills such as training choir, training band and fundamentals of music were taken just as seriously as the performing groups.

Music Theory was an individual study course offered to those who wanted further knowledge of the mechanics of music.

Business Students Make Difference

Below top: Junior Diana Knox perfects her filing system in clerical practice class. Below bottom: In accounting, sophomore Helen Jordan uses the adding machine to figure totals on her practice set.

"I didn't know there was so much in a business or taxes."

"Learn about computers and business machines."

"You learn about the Law of the Land."

"Something I could go into after school."

"Record keeping teaches me how to do my own taxes and keep my own records."

"Even if you can't type well you can type for your own convenience."

"Accounting has helped me understand the business world better and how the business system works."

"You get to do practice sets which make you feel as if you are an accountant."

It's not just a class for students; to some it is learning a trade. Business is something that they can do for the rest of their lives.

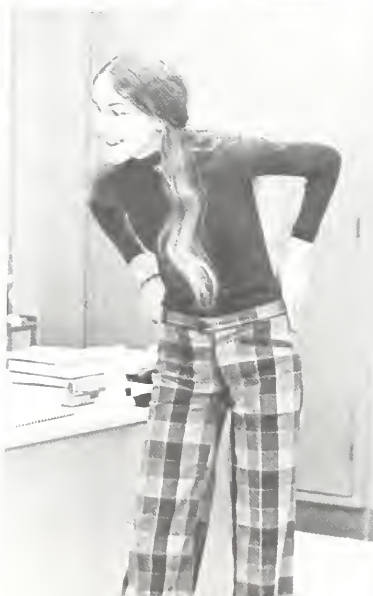

Although some may take the class just for the credit, the others are learning a career or learning a way of making college life a little easier.

This year Elmhurst offered the standard courses of accounting, typing, shorthand, clerical practice, etc. But what made it so different were the students who took the courses.

Not just one course is offered in each field; instead the students are able to build up speed and accuracy by continuing in the same field from one year to the next.

In COE students are able to apply what they have learned at a job. They work four hours a day, earning six credits. These students must also take the COE class at Elmhurst.

English: It's Important

Below: Yearbook requires much patience and skill which Yvette Merrill displays in her Senior auction. Bottom: Mrs. Wellington collects Melissa Hunter's Mar In Conflict assignment.

"Drama helped me get up in front of people."

"The speech teacher really encourages you to participate and helps in any way he can."

"Psychological literature was different and concerned itself with many areas of human behavior. It taught me something new."

"Debate is giving practical experience in what I will need, public speaking and effectively being able to research and argue a good topic."

"Learning to write properly is important no matter what field you go into."

"Journalism gets you in contact with people, teaches you how to deal with them."

"The freedom and casualness of journalism that students enjoy."

"The teacher of creative writing helped me learn about myself and she didn't worry about testing but self-expression."

The required three years of English is a little less than exciting for some students. The new elective English has taken some of the boredom away.

Students at Elmhurst this year were able to do things away from standard English. Some students chose to go into speech, drama, argument and debate. Others chose journalism. All these classes are different from what was considered English in the past.

With the new English elective system, new courses are being offered from one year to the next. Although some courses were dropped from the curriculum, some new English classes are being offered in addition to the familiar ones; these are Psychological Literature/Effective Reading, American Minorities/Career Communications, and Children's Literature.

Students Are Keeping Healthy

"Gym keeps me healthy."

"Weightlifting for football training and it builds you up."

"Keeps you in shape."

"It helps me get along with other kids in competition."

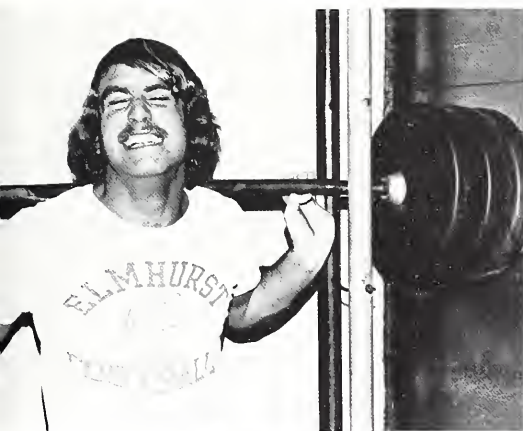

Providing a course that achieves development physically as well as mentally is the job of the physical education department. For girls, dancing, gymnastics, archery, volleyball, and badminton were some of the areas touched in basic p.e. classes. Boys found body strengthening and competition in weightlifting, basketball, volleyball and track. Advanced phys. ed. classes were added this year, along with a course on modern dance where student teacher Diane Mankey assisted Mrs. Doswell in leading the students in her specialty. Calisthenics still play an important part in every form of physical development.

Above: Performing what she does best in phys. ed., student teacher Miss Diane Mankey is doing a floor exercise.

Working Hands of Students

"It's a good trade."
 "Shop offers many interesting items."
 "Drafting is the field of work I'm interested in."
 "I like to make things, and a person learns things every day."
 "I liked drafting because we were the only two girls in the class."
 "Shop was great because I got to make a useful stereo cabinet."
 "I like working with my hands."
 "Being a chick in drafting, you get help from all the guys."

Balsa wood, metals, and complete house plans provided the drafting classes with learning projects that would be useful for future architects. Technical drawing was also emphasized for draftsman training. Shop math was another class this year where the metric system, compared to the English measuring system, was studied for practical use in the shop.

Bookshelves, gunracks, chess tables, and stereo cabinets all were common constructions of the woods. Developing finished projects from plain wood boards allowed students to work with shop machines such as radial arm saws, table saws, routers, surfacers, planers and sanders.

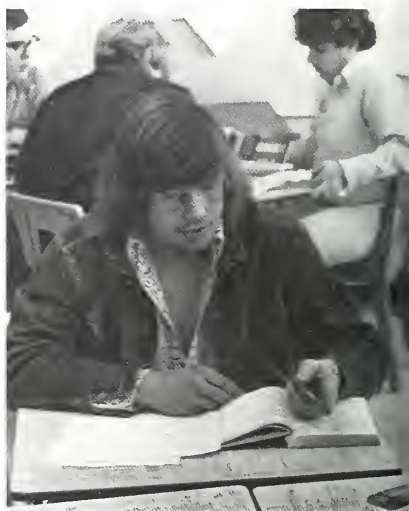

The first project of the metals class was making a screw driver, followed by hammers, wrenches and other tools. Working with lathes and spot welding experienced students far further work in metals.

Students Find Math Important

Above: Norm Elkins and Ken Davis put their applied math skills to use. Below: Calculators find their place in applied math classes and make math a breeze for Brian Fuller.

"Business math showed me how to figure bank balances and taxes."

"Calculus is so completely different from what we have done in math before."

"It has taught me many kinds of new math that I need to get along with in the world."

"Geometry opens up the idea of using logic."

"You have more jobs where you need math than history of other things."

"Math is very important in our life and the classes have been very entertaining (eraser fights, spitwads, squirt guns, rubber bands)."

There is much more to math than just adding and subtracting. Business math prepares students for their future work in business, management and administrations. Shop math deals with figures and solutions to common shop problems.

Advanced classes such as algebra, geometry, trigonometry and calculus ventured into deeper aspects of theorems and formulas. Some of the students took part in the National High School Math Contest on March 11. Competition included advanced math problems where Wes Byrne obtained one of the highest scores in the city.

Classes Assume Relevant Perspective

Courses to benefit students in their lives after high school were popular electives this year. American minorities/career helped students in finding jobs and deciding on future careers. Students learned how to get along better with people.

The art department under direction of Mr. Don Goss offered photography. Students took and developed their own pictures, concentrating on special effects.

First Time Classes: 1974-75

New classes were offered in every field this year at Elmhurst. Courses varied from psychology to boys' tumbling. Advanced physical education classes consisted of girls' advanced p.e. and dance and boys' advanced gym, which dealt with body building techniques. Seniors were given another choice of elective social studies in values and issues. Change! gave students a new aspect of history. Offered for the first time in Fort Wayne Community Schools was psychology, taught by Mr. Glenn Miller.

THE FAMILY MAN

For I am the AMERICAN FAMILY man.
I am KING of my castle, and LORD of my clan.
Eight hours a day, I toil for pay
To fight the WORLD, hold it at bay.
And at my HOME, I am the MASTER.
Without my sight, it would be a DISASTER.
FEAR me, my children, for I hold the KEY
And I'll BEAT you when you don't LISTEN to me!
The RESPECT you lack is in your GENERATION;
You owe me love and VENERATION
But you think for YOURSELVES, a slender sign
Thus, not befitting any property of MINE
Until you are EIGHTEEN, you will follow my LIGHT
Or know the slogan, "MIGHT makes RIGHT".
What do you do, to BACK what you say
And what do you GIVE, to ease my WAY?
I am your ALL, your PAST and PRESENT.
Ordain me o GOD, and I will be pleasant
And when you are grown up, you will follow my TRAIL
For the best way to HEAVEN is to "LIVE through HELL".

SWEEPING THE STARS

Come all my children,
Come with me to the stars,
So far and wide the time is ours.

So you have a telescope? We can use mine.
To the north and south, let's see what we find.

Let's skip the moon, it's been done before,
On through the galaxy there's so much more.

What was that flash of light, falling through the night?
Why, it's just another meteorite!

On, on my children, there's more than this.
Let's slip through the atmosphere in my rocket ship.
Give me a countdown, let's be an our way.
On to Andromeda . . . if we may.

Let's stop at Mars, the planet of Ted,
Home of the Martians, so man has said.

There is a dust storm arising,
So we cannot land.
On, on . . . the outer limits, we will span.

Ancient seamen charted courses, by these stars,
In this tranquil sea, we'll plot ours.

The course is set
Straight ahead . . .
Lies Andromeda . . .
Perhaps life had bred?!

Andromeda man we did not find
But you can see . . . that intelligence lies in infinity?

Wide is the path and for is the star.
Does it make you wonder, who you are?

"APPROACHING THE END"

Life is like an ever flowing river,
Forging onward.
Never pausing to allow us to think,
To contemplate.
We make mistakes and wish for a chance to right them,
But life goes on.

Life's gushing waters recede
Evermore
Until only a single lonely drop of water remains behind
To fall into Death's pool of eternal silence,
As life ebbs.

The water ripples as a human life
Fades away,
And the pool is calm once more,
Never to be disturbed,
Never to be awakened,
For it is too late to turn back now.
Death has struck.

The Ballad of the Oreo Cookie

My name is Tom, his was Tony,
I was sitting at the lunch table, all alone.
Tany walked by my table.
And sat down with a sigh and a moan.

"Mind if I sit here?" he asked.
I shook my head, no.
"Mind if I eat lunch with you?"
I shook my head, no:

I opened my brawn paper sack,
And pulled out a baloney sandwich, breaking my fast.
I drank some milk and munched on a potato chip,
And saved my beloved oreo for last.

Tony watched me eat my oreo hungrily,
As he chewed on his lunch tray.
His eyes opened wide, while I
Brushed away crumbs of gray.

Every day he ate at my table and
Each day I grew more fann of Tany
Until the tragic incident of mod 9 occurred
When I found his kind words were phoney.

I remember the day it all happened.
I had my brawn paper bag.
He had a lunch tray with a soyburger.
"Crummy lunch," he said. "What a drag."

I opened my brawn paper sack
And looked for my oreo, but with a cough
And a gag, I saw it was not there.

Gray crumbs around his mouth, Tony ripped it off.

I could not hold my anger back.
I snatched the nearest fork,
Its tines gleaming in the light,
And stabbed Tany like a piece of park.

They buried Tony just last week,
While I sit here in jail.
They don't give me any oreo cookies
So I let out long screams and a wail.

Never again to be assembled here with our friends.
Never again to skip class for a coney dog.
We won't be sharing each day as we have in the past.
The past.

We've shared a lot of laughs together.
We've shed a lot of tears together.
We've been through victory and defeat.
Through changes and routine.
We've decked the halls for holidays.
And we've watched bare, colorless walls being transformed with crepe paper, signs and balloons.
We've watched from our own crowd some celebrities and class clowns.
We've had presidents and leaders to guide us.
But now that's all changing.
We should be changing too.

We've built school spirit from six cheerleaders to a rumbling crowd,
We've enjoyed an embarrassed but proud faculty join in our comedy.
We know who has the sexiest legs in the school.
And we've seen sentimentality in the toughest men.
We've been proud to sing the Trojan's song,
and to wear red.
But never again.

Never again will we rush to class at the last minute.
Never again to drop books in the hall or slam a locker door out of disgust.
There won't be any more morning announcements
Telling us what we have on the agenda.
There won't be any more bells to pace your day by.
And soon that last bell is going to ring.
The last time.
Perhaps then we will realize what has happened.
We will realize that we can never re-live life
as we lived then.
We will have to begin again, to start all over.
But maybe this time, just maybe we will realize what we have before it's gone . . . forever.

Poopsie is a baby elephant. She was abandoned when she was very very little. Poopsie was a very nice elephant, but she had no friends. The little animals were scared of her because even though she was a baby, she was an elephant and elephants, even baby ones, are very big. The other elephants made fun of her because she wasn't ordinary elephant. Poopsie was very shy and clumsy which is quite unusual for elephants. Poopsie was very sad, she had no friends. Poor, poor Poopsie!

She decided to run far away to the edge of the jungle and live all by herself. There were no animals here and she was so lonely she would cry and cry. All of a sudden she discovered that she was surrounded by plants that seemed to be alive and coming closer to her. She stopped crying long enough to hear them whisper, "What's wrong?" "Who's talking?" she asked, "Who's talking?" "We are," answered the flowers. "Flowers don't talk," said Poopsie. "We do and we want to help you." "I don't have any friends," said Poopsie. "Oh but you do, look around you, we are all your friends," answered the flowers.

"Oh wow!" she exclaimed, and with that she picked up one of the largest flowers with her tail and gave it a great big kiss with her trunk. "I'm so happy!" she exclaimed, and there she remained with her new found friends.

Chester Chimp lives in the biggest tree in the jungle. All day he just swings from tree to tree, or eats bananas, and sometimes he even rests.

Chester loves bananas and one day as he grabbed a bunch, something unexpected happened. He was carrying the bunch of bananas home for dinner when out popped a tiny bird from the middle.

"Hi there," chirped the bird.

"Why, who are you?" inquired Chester.

"My name is Tweeter, and I was living in this bunch of bananas before you picked them."

"Oh, I'm sorry," said Chester.

"That's ok. I was getting tired of living there anyway. What's your name?"

"Chester's the name, Chester Chimp."

"Well howdy Chester, where do you live?"

"In the biggest tree in the jungle," said Chester proudly. "Would you like to come to dinner?"

"Sure, why not," replied Tweeter.

They ate their dinner; Chester ate bananas, and Tweeter, being sick of bananas, found some berries near by. Tweeter spent the night and they had so much fun watching Wild Kingdom and exchanging people jokes.

"Hey Tweeter, we're friends, right?"

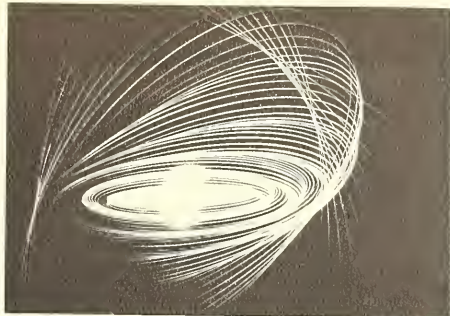

"Sure Chester," replied Tweeter quickly.

"Why don't you stay with me from now on?"

"Great!" chirped Tweeter.

And Chester and Tweeter lived happily, eating, swinging, flying and sometimes resting.

BEOPER, THE LITTLE RED VOLKSWAGEN

Beeper, the little red Volkswagen ran slowly down the wide street. It was snowing and Beeper was wet and cold.

"Oh, my poor body. How I wish I was at home in my own garage!" cried Beeper.

Cars kept on passing him; he wasn't used to all this traffic, he lived in the country.

"Hurry up, hurry up!" hanked a taxi behind him. Beeper could feel the taxi's hot breath on his tail lights, and it was making him uncomfortable. He wanted to go slow on the slick streets so he wouldn't skid and hurt his fenders.

Beeper was so worried, he forgot to watch the traffic signals and he went right through a red light. He screeched on his brakes, but he was too late. Here came another taxi! SMASH! Right into Beeper's rear fender.

Beeper didn't know what to do, he just stood there helpless. He wished with all his parts that he was safely home. Behind him he heard the taxi snicker and say, "Can't you see a red light?" "Oh, leave the little fellow alone," said a big truck, "You're enough to blow out a tire!"

Just then, a traffic policeman came up and asked, "Is anyone hurt?" "No, no one's hurt," said a man, "only a bent fender and broken wheel."

"Oh, people think a broken wheel is nothing," cried Beeper, "but if anything happens to them, they get excited and rush to the hospital!"

The traffic officer said, "We need a wrecking car, the wheel is broken." A while later the wrecking car came. "Well, little Beeper," he called, "was the city too much for you?" Then a man came back and hooked little Beeper onto the wrecking car. "Now here we go!" said the wrecking car in a kind voice.

They took him to a garage and stuck him in the corner and just left him. He was there the whole winter. Then one day he smelled spring in the air. He wished he was out there. He didn't think he was ever going to get out.

But one day, two boys came in looking for a car to use for going on a camping trip out west. The garage man showed him Beeper and right away they liked him. So they fixed him up and gave him a new paint job.

Beeper couldn't believe it! He was going out west, he was going to be able to get out of the garage.

So the next day they were off! But just as they were leaving the city, a taxi came up behind him. "Get out of my way," hanked the taxi. "Not on your life," yelled Beeper, and went as slow as he pleased.

"Where do you think you're going?" boomed the taxi. "Out west," yelled Beeper.

He backfired in the taxi's face and off he went, leaving the taxi coughing and sputtering!

For up in the foothills
Deep in Tennessee
I found her crumbled cabin
Where the wind can only breathe
And stutter at my gloom
For scarcely had the night begun
When the clocks did strike the moon
Her haggard face came forward
As whispered through the night
She asked if I would lead her for she'd long Since lost her eyes.
She sat me down beside the fire
With slowly dying coal
And outside tho' the wind did scream
The cabin only moaned
And then she asked me questions
Of my parents and my life.
To my reply "I've never known,"
A smile did cross her face.
"You see" she said,
"Your mother died
As you did leave the womb
But left inside
A twin did lie
Kicking at his tomb."

And noticing the cabin door
Went crashing on its hinge
And just outside a woman stood
With hair like blacken fringe
And then upon her seeing me
She screamed and turned to run
But through the wind I heard her say
"The dead can bear no son"
And then the hag did stand again
She hobbled on her cane
And clutching at the narrow door
She called my mother's name.

He was a passenger of the city.
He walked voiceless.
His steps were shuffles to old sewers,
His jewels were tin tabs pulled from Coors,
He was unknissed and so was glanced by with eyes
Only seeing him as mindless
Matterless-like tissue glued in a collage.

He was pillage of the city . . .
'Til he one day grabbed the string of a balloon

He was sensed with the full youth, full height of fanciful sights that made solely the sounds of within.

ATTACK OF THE GIANT THUMB

For Ronda, who digs monsters.

The wind came from the west. It was a cool, soft breeze. No one yet knew that with it came trouble. The town had been asleep for hours, when it happened. It started as a dull roar and increased to a mighty crash. Before we knew it, the Giant Thumb was upon us!

I fell out of bed and woke to find myself on top of the stereo. Then another room wall was now a big hole with what appeared to be a giant fingernail sticking in it. It was at this time that I began running.

Running out of what was left of the front door, I saw it was a Giant Thumb. It was at least forty feet high and fifty feet across.

The Thumb was dragging a string of telephone poles along with many other assorted items. Among them, mail boxes, trees, cars, and it even had a bicycle behind it. Then it thumped around the supermarket and was lost to my sight.

In the morning, when the sun was up, the town inspected the damage. Everywhere one looked they saw destruction. Schools were demolished. Houses were smashed. Trees, shrubs, cars, hotels, and factories were all flattened. The pond in the park was now empty (since the Thumb had "stepped" in it) and fish were flopping all over.

I walked past all this on my way back to where my house had been. When I got back to my "house", I dug my tent out of a pile of boards. Considering the condition of my house, I would have to sleep in my tent. After getting it set up, I moved in and found it quite comfortable, although rather chilly.

Suddenly a tremendous crash told me the Thumb was back. The town looked like a rerun of last night. The Thumb was going right down Main Street, tearing up anything in its path. It seemed to go out of its way just to smash the police station.

The Thumb overturned cars, smashed its way through a pool hall, squashed a car wash, and knocked down the drive-in movie screen. Then it parked itself in the nearby shopping center. By this time the police had arrived and surrounded the Thumb. What they intended to do no one knows.

The Thumb then began to chase policemen and smash the nearby patrol cars. The police shot at the Thumb, but their bullets just bounced off.

Then for some reason the Thumb retreated on to the nearby woods. The trees snapped before it as if they were toothpicks. The Thumb took time out to smash some picnicker who happened to be nearby. Although one suffered slightly distorted legs, the other, a hippie with quick reflexes, fled the scene, unharmed. The Thumb then proceeded on its way, going deeper and deeper into the dark forest.

And here my story must end for lack of information. You see, nobody knows what happened to the giant thumb. Supposedly, the Thumb fell into the Limbo Swamp and his great weight pulled him down into the thick black tar.

But who knows? Could the giant Thumb still lurk about in unknown places? Who knows?

The fire crackles with the last few seconds of life
and I sit gozing, remembering moments gone by . . .

What about the time
we crossed the foot bridge
and lost our balance?
you hugged me and
told me you loved me;
And when Sparky died;
Sparky with whom we played and ran and loved . . .

(it was because of him
I met you, remember?)
you consoled me and said he will be loved forever now . . .

Then the time
we said goodbye,
the last goodbye,
for you were to return and touch
my life forever
after that
The fire is dead now,
it seems, yet

the wormth stays for a while more an undying ember wanting to live forever . . .
stir at my side
enfold your arms around me, hug me
and tell me you love me
once more . . .
The ember dies.

War: of despair and hope
 Her weary eyes scanned the horizon,
 Searching for a memory
 Hidden somewhere in the depths of her mind—
 The dim memory of war—
 And tears came to her eyes
 As once again she felt a deep emptiness . . .
 The emptiness she had felt years before
 When all she had known and loved had been destroyed.
 But that was long ago, and best forgotten.
 So she continued on her way,
 as

the memory grew dimmer,
 and dimmer,
 and dimmer . . .

Old Dog lay in the summer sun.
 Much too lazy to rise and run.
 He flapped an ear
 At a buzzing fly.
 He winked a half-opened sleepy eye.
 He scratched himself
 on an itching spot,
 As he dozed on the porch,
 Where the sun was hot.
 He whimpered a bit
 From force of habit
 While he lazily dreamed
 Of chasing a rabbit.
 But Old Dog happily lay in the sun
 Much too lazy to rise and run.

Wind

Wind can be a romantic breeze or a tragic storm.
When there is wind it always seems to beat the right time.

Wind accents the scene
even though it does not talk.

It is like invisible fingers that lift up the frocks of young girls.

It touches the leaves on the trees and bows them to the ground.

Without wind the world would be lethargic—
So still and so dull.

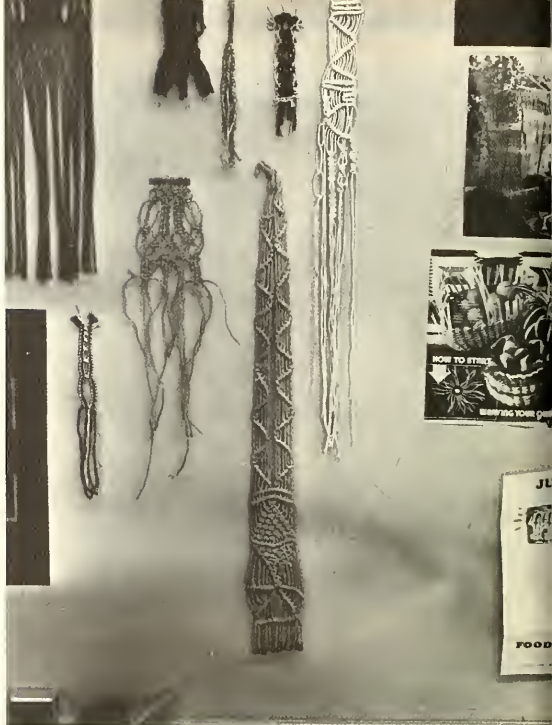

There would be no waves in the sea;
no kites in the sky—no flying ribbons on the hats of little children.
The world without character.

In my travels throughout the world the wind is always present playing its part sweeping the land yet still speaking to me in my native language.

Athletic director Paul Bienz proudly displays the plaque he received from the Indiana Track and Cross Country Hall of Fame.

Mr. Bienz's membership into the Hall of Fame was announced on January 10, in an article appearing in the Ft. Wayne Journal-Gazette.

Principal Richard Horstmeier enjoys the talents of rock group, "Under New Management," as one of the prettier members serenades him.

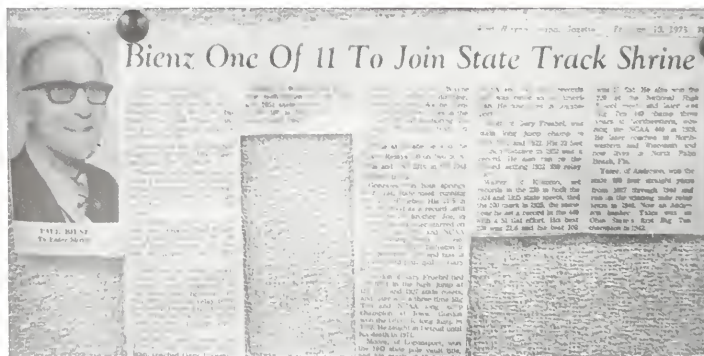

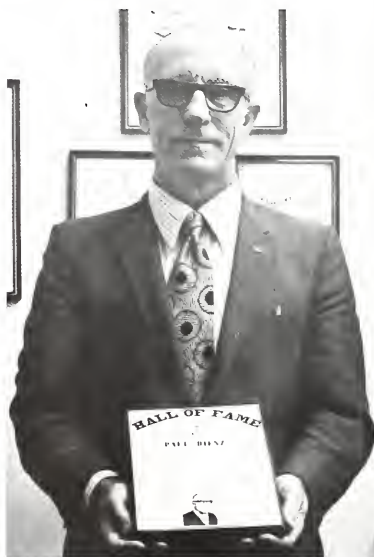

Bienz in Indiana Hall of Fame

Elmhurst athletic director Paul Bienz was one of eight honored this year with membership in the Indiana Track and Field Hall of Fame. His performance during high school and college years was considered before he was selected.

Mr. Bienz, who graduated from Central High School, was state champ while at Central in both the 100 and 200 yard dashes. He also won numerous championships while at Tulane University, and placed fifth in the 200 meter dash at the United States Olympic Trials in 1948.

With the retirement of Mrs. Grace Pennington last year, Elmhurst's administrative staff needed to fill the empty guidance post, and Mrs. Dinah Cashman gladly accepted.

Mrs. Cashman, who had been teaching English, left her classes last year for a month to take over for guidance counselor John Sinks, then in Indianapolis serving as an Indiana State Representative. This opportunity well acquainted Mrs. Cashman with the trials and tribulations of an Elmhurst guidance counselor.

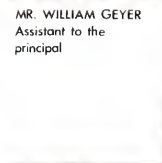

Sophomore counselor Mrs. Dinah Cashman and art director Mr. Don Goss speak with parents in the gym after this year's school play, "My Three Angels."

Mr. William Geyer and Mr. Doug Spencer discuss current school events with language instructor Mr. Michael Rathe, from Mr. Geyer's familiar corner in the lunch room.

Assistant Principal Robert Miller wears the smile of a proud father as he points to the Trojan head his daughter needle-pointed for his office.

Journalism instructor Mrs. Jane Hoylman spreads happiness through the halls of Elmhurst as she gets into the school spirit on dress down day.

On back to school night, Mr. Eithon Gwaltney attempts to explain the finer points of chemistry to a group of puzzled parents.

After the "pie" throwing is completed, Mr. Eytcheson dismounts from his ladder to return to the safety (?) of his classroom.

Mr. Carrier, Mr. Eytcheson, Mr. Bunnell, and an unidentified "pie-covered" teacher good-naturedly laugh through the "pies" thrown at them during a pep assembly.

Seven to Leave

Due to a reduction in projected fall enrollment, seven Elmhurst faculty members will be transferred to other Fort Wayne community schools.

The reduction in enrollment is attributed to various causes such as the lowered national population growth rate and a greater number of housing facilities in other Fort Wayne school districts (causing a migration of residents).

At Elmhurst enrollment at mid-year was only 1081, down 226 from the projected enrollment of 1307. Next year's projected enrollment is only 1150, so in order to keep a balanced student-teacher ratio of 25 to 1, seven teachers must be relocated elsewhere.

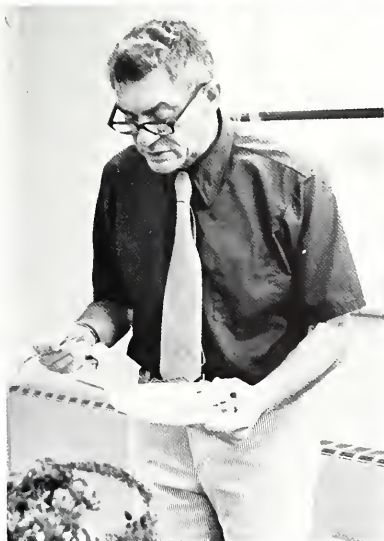

Mr. Carter Lahr frowns in the bright sunshine during one of Elmhurst's many track meets.

Foreign language teacher Mrs. Ofelia Herrera is caught explaining a difficult phrase to her Spanish class.

Mr. Poor conducts an interesting class—in the finer points of poker he certainly knows how to hold his class' attention!

Typing teacher Mr. Eldon Staops leaves his typewriter long enough to fill up his plate for lunch in the faculty dining room.

Mr. Del Westerman and Mrs. Violet Broxon, custodians at Elmhurst for many years, both retired this year.

Custodians Retire

Meals are prepared by women who often start cooking as early as 6:30 a.m. They begin with breakfast, which is available every morning in the cafeteria before school, and move on to prepare enough food for five lunch mods.

This year Elmhurst lost two members of its custodial help, Mr. Del Westerman, head custodian, and Mrs. Violet Broxon, who both retired. They had been at Elmhurst many years and were familiar faces to all of the students.

Feeder School Workshop Recruits Freshman

An enjoyable addition to the Elmhurst Chorale this year was Swiss exchange student Corinne Bucher.

To give the training choir extra experience, they began practicing and performing with the choir at the beginning of the second semester. Their first joint performance was at the Honors Choir—Mass Choir Concert which marked the start of the Bicentennial Celebration and Black History Week.

A Feeder School Workshop was held to recruit freshmen for choir. Sessions were held to instruct the kids on singing and the opportunities in choir.

The Trojan Singers' popularity increased this year as they sang in more concerts than ever before.

For various reasons Mr. Schmutz was unable to be at a few concerts and junior Andrea Marchese directed in his absence as well as accompanying on the piano.

Trojan Singers: ROW 1: A. Marchese, L. Vinsan, N. Marchese, C. Stanley, L. Longmeyer, C. Ross, P. Koehl. ROW 2: T. Syndram, G. Heckley, C. Johnson, Y. Morrill, A. Shaw, L. Marsches, P. Tyson, Mr. Schmutz. ROW 3: M. Maurer, D. Isenbarger, D. Frey, S. Botos, M. Wolfe, R. Sutorius, D. Archer.

Carolling through the halls with other Trojan Singers, juniors Pot Tyson and Mike Maurer lift the spirits of patients at the Veterans Hospital at Christmas.

At practice, Trojan Singers, junior Greg Heckley and seniors Dan Isenbarger and Nina Marchese follow Mr. Schmutz's directions to improve their singing.

Philharmonic Assists in Concert Teaching Seminar

The orchestra invited several guests from the Fort Wayne Philharmonic Orchestra, to assist in concerts and teaching. The annual Concerto Concert in which only the strings play featured junior Verne Myers on the clarinet and Tim Wells of the Philharmonic on the French horn this year.

A clarinet player and a string ensemble from the Philharmonic held small seminars during orchestra practice for the different sections.

Changing his style of instruction, Mr. Morse used the winds only when they were needed in an arrangement.

The annual Christmas assembly was presented to the student body in conjunction with the choir. A few days later the Christmas Concert was held in the Elmhurst gym for the public.

The Elmhurst orchestra toured in the spring giving concerts for the feeder or area elementary schools.

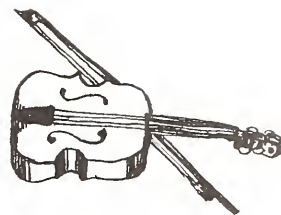

At the end of the year, they participated in area NISBOVA competition. Several people were awarded superior ratings in solo and ensemble competition.

Relaxing between numbers, junior Melissa Hunter listens to the Trojan Singers at the Christmas assembly while chewing her violin.

While other orchestra members are reflected in the kettle drum, senior Don Schory and juniors Kent Kelsey and Bill Mazelin keep the beat.

Just before orchestra practice, junior Dione Knox removes her monster contra alto clarinet from the case with mixed emotions.

Surrounded by fellow orchestra members, junior Claudio Brack concentrates on her violin music.

Was That Trumpet Solo 'Really Cooking' or 'Toilet'?

If you walked into the bond room you were likely to hear words such as Berg, Moose, Rino, or Fuzz flying around, but only to the band kids were they names. Besides the nicknames they had a language to describe their own play like "toilet," "really cooking," or "a bear."

Being renowned around the state, Jazz Band I played at the opening ceremonies of the new Hobart High School auditorium in November. They performed with the famous Maynard Ferguson band and three other honor bands.

To gain experience, the concert band and Jazz Band I toured five schools April 17-19, stopping in Greenwood, Indiana, for one night. Their destination was Louisville, Kentucky, before returning home.

Both jazz bonds competed in Midwestern Regionals at Crown Point, although neither band attained the honor band award.

When asked what band meant to her, senior Angelo Gensic replied, "Working together brings a sense of fulfillment that you can only know by experience."

Hopely a little bit of the class of the Fort Wayne Country Club will rub off on Jazz Band II as they play for the employees' Christmas party.

Getting down with his plunger as a mute, senior Dave Rinehart ad libs his trombone solo far an enthusiastic crowd at the Penny Arcade.

Playing a trumpet solo with ease, yet concentration, junior Benjie Berry performs for an appreciative audience at the Second Annual "An Evening With Jazz."

Portraying a Trojan beating an Archer at a pep session, senior Tina Faster is cheered on by the rest of the varsity squad, even though her pants won't stay up.

"Trojans are great," cheers squad captain senior Bonnie Carrian as she leads the fans in a chant at the Hamestead game.

Hoping her free throw encouragement will help her Trojan, junior Melissa Hunter yells "Sink it" as she does the splits.

Varsity, Reserves Perform High Mounts Together

To provide them with more experience, the reserve squad was included in more activities and cheers. Together, the squads performed high-rising mounts that gained gasps and applause from Trojan spectators who had not seen such gymnastics performed by the cheerleaders before.

To increase their funds, the cheerleaders held more money-making projects with car washes, a bake sale, and a button sale included. The selling of hats at sectional time was very successful again this year.

In August, both squads

Reached up and out at a pep session, senior Deedee Kreiger does the school song routine as the band plays on.

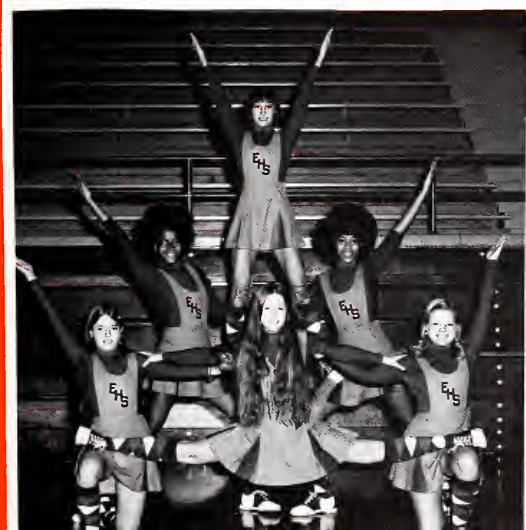

travelled to Ohio State University in Columbus, Ohio to participate in the cheerleading camp. They learned new cheers and began working together for the new year.

Contrary to popular belief, cheerleading wasn't as easy as it seemed sometimes, for the girls had a set of rules they followed carefully. The year still was very rewarding for most of them. "I love to cheer for my school and all the sports," commented captain Bonnie Carrion. "It is very rewarding if you put in all you've got and I also get to meet a lot of people."

Doing a sequence cheer during a reserve game time out, each reserve cheerleader yells "Let's go" one after another.

Spirit Clubs Become Firmly Established

Elmhurst students continued building school spirit this year by increasing their booster activities.

The pom-pam squad and the twirlers provided "eye-catching" halftime routines at games. Using wands and two-colored gloves besides their pom-poms, they performed to such tunes as Gershwin's "Summertime" at basketball games and with the marching band on the football field.

Although it was suggested the Trojan Takedowns helped the wrestlers by practicing with them, the girls lifted spirits by decorating the locker room, painting posters and cheering at meets.

The Trojan Tracksters accompanied the trackmen to meets to cheer, take care of their equipment and assist in keeping track records. Acting as bat boys, water boys and cheerleaders, the Diamond Devils worked with the baseball team again this year.

The girls in each booster club were proud and happy to be a part of their favorite Elmhurst athletic team.

Twirlers: Mary Freygang; Rachelle Kellaris, Head Majorette; Marilyn Krotke.

Perhaps senior Crystal Cary's intensive watching won't help the Elmhurst wrestler win, but she still keeps an accurate varsity team score.

As did the other Trojan Takedowns at the pep session, junior Carol Quance escorts an Elmhurst wrestler across the gym, hers being senior Bill Frank.

Prosperous Candy Sales Provide Funds for OEA, DECA

DECA, a club and class combined, taught the students about the many different aspects of retailing, the buying and selling of merchandise, advertising and management.

The students held a job related to their class. McDonald's, Sycamore Shop and others employed Elmhurst students throughout the year.

Their big fund-raiser was a candy sale, and a lesser-known one was a sign-making project.

The members of the Office Education Association, better known as OEA, also held class-related jobs. In the classroom they learned the many different clerical skills needed, including the more specialized ones of accounting, Recordkeeping and filing were taught. The club honored the January grads by dining at Zoli's Chalet.

Several girls competed in the area competition, but senior Mary Freygang was the only one to place on the state level.

OEA raised most of their funds with an almost year long candy sale. Through OEA many girls were able to find a valuable position in the business world.

Johnny Appleseed Halloween Party Favorite Event

The Y-Teens started out the year with a Halloween party at Johnny Appleseed, complete with costumes and decorations.

Although the girls have worked with Miss Virginia for many years, the Christmas project continued to be a favorite. They organized school-wide participation by putting boxes in each room for donations. A candy cane sale and Student Council money added to Miss Virginia's present.

Using donated cloth, the Y-Teens cut squares and sewed them together to make quilt tops for the State School.

In March they spent a pleasant evening with the people who make their home in the Allen County Health Center.

"Y-Teens made us all become aware of different life styles. The most interesting and enjoyable experiences were with Miss Virginia and our party at Johnny Appleseed," expressed the president, senior Holly Miller.

They rounded out the year by helping at YMCA International Festival and sponsoring a dance in April.

Cornered at Johnny Appleseed, senior Holly Miller defends herself against Stewart, the ferocious tiger with the funny tail.

Chaos, Chaos Everywhere Before Penny Arcade

"Hey, help me set this up, will ya?" "How does this get-up look?" "We'll never be ready in time!" These were common exclamations before the first Penny Arcade, in November, which proved to be a successful fun night.

Preparations were hectic and no one thought booths would be ready when the doors opened to the public on Saturday night.

Quill and Scroll had spent two weeks preparing the elaborate Freak-Out House in the tunnels, complete with a vampire, a mad scientist, and the sponge room.

At each booth, the workers had shifts that weren't easy, as people kept coming to keep everyone busy. Some passed out little prizes such as Chinese handcuffs and plastic animals while others amused the kids.

For those behind the scenes the long night was not over when the crowd disappeared. After booths were disassembled, good-byes and sighs of relief filled the halls as tired students trudged toward the doors. It was a night they had made memorable for themselves and others.

Almost unrecognizable under all her clown paint, Swiss exchange student Corinne Bucher attempts to sell her grab bags to some teasing friends.

To this unsuspecting victim, junior Jim McClenghen, the vampire, was a terrifying figure out of the darkness.

Believe it or not, that's senior Greg Hershberger under the green gook, trying to scare people right into the Freak-Out House.

"You will meet a tall, dork and handsome gentleman soon," forecasts senior Leslie Raymer for a customer in the Y-Teens booth.

Many Kids Get Egg Shampoo at Spring Day

Striving to serve Elmhurst, the Student Council continued to develop activities and get involved academically.

Starting a new school tradition, the Penny Arcade was planned and held at Elmhurst in November with other city schools participating.

Together, the Student Council and the cheerleaders initiated several Spirit Days such as dress-up, hat, and dress-down days.

For the first time, a semi-formal Christmas dance was held at the Waynedale Community Center with music provided by the Whispers.

To relieve some of the tension that comes with spring fever, an afternoon from school was spent messing around. Tug-of-war rope burns, egg-covered heads, grass-stained knees from running on obstacle course and jammed volleyball fingers were all evidence that at least a couple hundred kids had a good time.

Acting as Elmhurst representatives, Student Council members were guides at Back-to-School Night and counselors at sophomore orientation. For student needs, sand buckets and mirrors were installed in the boys' restrooms.

At a typical meeting in the cafeteria, the representatives and officers discuss and plan future activities for Elmhurst.

AFS Weekend, Paper Drives Keep Members Busy

Although the main objective of the American Field Service is to raise money for the exchange of students, the members had fun while doing it.

After a membership drive in September, old and new members got together and built a prize-winning float for the Homecoming parade.

In early October, adult and student AFS members and exchange students from the Fort Wayne area gathered at a home to get acquainted.

Their funds came from many varied areas. Rain or shine, members knocked on doors collecting newspapers twice during the year. A popular event again this year was the Mass-Media vs. Faculty Basketball Game featuring local TV, radio and newspaper personalities. The exhibition volleyball game was held in conjunction with senior homeroom volleyball finals.

The club had a part in other school projects such as the PTA Pancake Breakfast, the World Wide Dinner during Brotherhood Week and the Penny Arcade.

On the hectic day before the paper is issued, junior Nancy Beadie types copy to be sent to press.

The Paper's Out, Hit the Tables

"I'm going to Qualtype now. Is there any more copy that should be ready to go?" About every Monday Mrs. Hoylman asked this of about 15 people who were writing, typing, or pasting up as fast as they could.

After the paper was issued everyone took a vacation. The few that remained behind found a soft-spot on a table or counter and dreamed of fairyland.

During the summer several staffers took time to attend newspaper institutes at Ball State in Muncie and Indiana University in Bloomington. Already equipped with basic journalism skills, they learned the finer points of being a good reporter and writer.

In October, the Fort Wayne Newspapers were visited by the entire staff.

Although the ADVANCE had more ads than any other city high school paper, financial difficulties at one point in the year resulted in a switch from 16 to 8 pages for one issue.

Since no one wanted the responsibility of president, Quill and Scroll Honor Society had seven head officers. The group enjoyed an active year.

The main source of funds was the Freak-Out House at the Penny Arcade. They sponsored a Christmas party and year-end party.

In May, awards and new staff positions were given and new Quill and Scroll members were initiated at the banquet of the Big Wheel on the Landing.

New Creative Section Features Student Artwork

During the year it seemed Room 108, the publications room, was where the action was. A constant flow of traffic and mouths kept things moving.

The feud between yearbookers and newspaper people remained steady. At deadline time the crossfire increased as everyone fought for the use of photographers and typewriters. Despite the rivalry, both staffs felt at home together digging up facts, and putting them onto a written page.

The Indiana University Journalism Institute was attended by section editors seniors Karen Fahlsing and Crystal Cary and co-editor Cathy Cary to perfect writing and cropping techniques. Co-editor senior Holly Miller attended Ball State's seminar in July.

The book stressed individuality with the new creative section, which featured photographs, poetry, stories and art work of the students.

Solo Speech Team Keeps Sectional Title

Almost every Saturday of the year, solo speech participants of the Farum Club travelled all over northern Indiana to meets. They performed in eleven different areas which included drama, impromptu, humor, and others.

With the team taking a first in the sectionals at Elmhurst, 15 people placed high enough in their area to go to regionals. Individual firsts were seniors Liz Kerns in girl's extemp and Steve Margan in boy's extemp.

At Columbia City, five people placed in the regionals to go to state with sophomore Karyn Heiney receiving a first in oratorical interpretation.

Ending the season at Laganspart, Indiana, senior Liz Kerns placed third in state in girl's extemp.

Although the debate team had an average season due to a lack of new members, several placed during the season. Seniors Liz Kerns and Steve Margan participated in state competition. Senior Brenda Ginder and juniors Les Novitsky and Diane Lupke were chosen to attend State Congress.

The long-awaited trophy case was built by Mr. Lambert and sophomores Mike Rush and Nelson Almand.

Performing their duties again this year the Lettermen's Club happily acted as escorts for the homecoming court. In March they parked cars at the Mass-Media-Faculty Basketball Game.

Stefanski Awarded GAA State Plaque

The Afro-American Club activity schedule kept the many members busy. The club organized several skating parties for themselves. They also sponsored popular record hops after three home basketball games.

In early February, the Afro-American members planned Black History Week. The week's activities included Career Day with Fort Wayne businessmen, displays, and a dance assembly with the group, Society, Inc.

The club's part in Brotherhood Week was a play, "In White America." The proceeds of $150 were donated to the Children's Zoo for the African Veldt.

Other funds were used for a trip to the Black History Library in Chicago and a trip to Cedar Point.

Using a modern style of fashion presentation, the annual Talent-Fashion Show included students and faculty from Elmhurst, Kekiong and Portage. After an hour of fashion and 23 acts of talent, the evening program was topped with a dance featuring Sound, Inc.

Although the membership of the GAA had declined within the past few years, the members were active. Sports played during Thursday meetings included archery, tumbling and occasionally practices with the girls' varsity teams in tennis and basketball.

Because of her attendance, active participation and tested skills of three years, GAA president Teddy Stefanski was awarded a state GAA plaque.

Trojans Take South and Slice of S.A.C.

The question: Can a team be a winning team without having a winning season? The answer: Elmhurst gridiron.

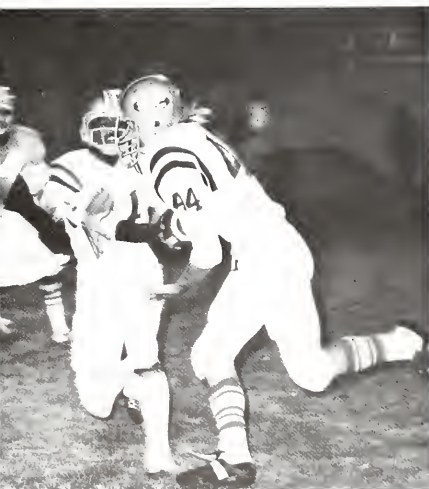

With five defeats behind him and number one in the S.A.C., South Side, in front of him, new head coach Tom Herman could have given up. "They can't beat South Side, South even beat Luers!" But does a coach give up? Elmhurst 35, South 27.

The Trojans went on to beat North and Wayne and capture a piece of the three way tie for first place in the South division of the Summit Athletic Conference. South was voted into the playoffs, but Elmhurst did beat them.

Because of his outstanding ability as a tackle, senior Dove Boyer was voted onto the All-S.A.C. team.

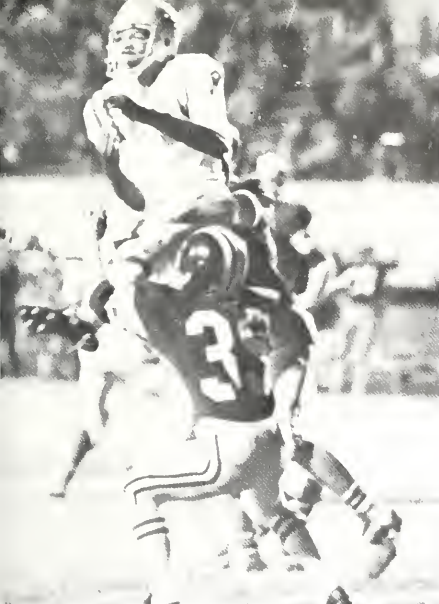

Captain Herman prepares to send in a play with co-captain Reggie Hill. Reggie called the defensive signals for the Trojans as well as alternating with Ed Peters for the running back position on offense.

Taking the ball from the quarterback, senior fullback Ed Peters chooses a hole made for him by the offensive line. Ed provided the power in the backfield needed for those few extra yards.

Sophomore quarterback Brian Russell uses a straight-arm to get past a Luers tackler. Brian was a threat as a third running back, taking pressure off Green and Peters.

Sensing a fumble, Trojan defenders converge and smother a Northrop back.

Breaking away from a Cadet tackler, sophomore Nelson Almond makes the first down. After gaining experience in reserve ball, Nelson was moved up to the varsity team.

Reserves Build Varsity

They call it the number one sport in America, and if the spirit keeps moving in the direction it took this season, football could well become the number one sport at Elmhurst.

The reserve team had the will, and certainly the ability, to win, but the flow was just not there. With several of the players alternating between varsity and reserve, the team play was not achieved. Mr. Jim Lambert acted as head coach for the team.

Playing a total of eight games, the reserve team didn't do so good in terms of statistics, winning only one. But what the statistics didn't show was the important part the team played in shaping the varsity. Many hours were spent learning and executing the plays of the varsity's opponents.

Backfield action is shown as sophomore quarterback Dave Stein hands off to sophomore John White. Dave played quarterback and defensive halfback for the reserve squad.

Will they get the first down? The rain doesn't seem to cool down the intensity of the situation as sophomore Troi Lee and spectator Gary Inel look on.

Season record		1-7

Lack of Depth Hinders Tennis Squad

Full of desire but lacking the depth needed to keep a team winning, the tennis team struggled through many close matches to end the season with only two wins, those coming against South Side and Wayne.

As a senior, Greg Hershberger filled the number one position with senior Jim Theye playing second man most of the season. Third and fourth men, sophomores Tad Huntley and Ted Ornas played first doubles with junior Stan Sorgen taking the third singles spot. Seniors George Huber and Lynn Brown combined for the second doubles squad.

With play being changed this year to put emphasis on team competition instead of individual efforts, team spirit was much in need. With no home courts, a lack of tennis balls, and a new coach every year, this spirit was hard to find. New coach Robert Horn faught to help keep the team's confidence up.

Although the record showed few wins, the matches were always close with many going into the third set or into tie-breakers.

Returning a backhand volley, senior Greg Hershberger continues rushing the net to try for the putaway shot. Greg won his first match in sectionals, but due to the new ruling on team play he was unable to go on. Greg also won the most valuable player award for tennis.

Returning the serve, senior George Huber smashes a crosscourt shot while senior Lynn Brown awaits the return at the net. George and Lynn played second doubles in sectionals.

Harriers Regain City Status

All the work and rebuilding of the last two years seems to have taken hold for the cross country team. Fighting for their comeback, the harriers ended the season with an excellent 16-5-1 record.

The outstanding underclass running, combined with the talents and leadership of senior Paul Stevens, helped lead the team out of its slump. Paul finished first several times during the year and clocked in a best time of 12:05. Sophomore Tim Lee and junior Bob Levy added depth to the teams ability and placed among the top runners in most of the meets.

Surely the harriers have regained the respect they once held as one of the top Fort Wayne teams.

Keeping his steady pace, senior Paul Stevens strides through the Swinney Park straight-away. Paul, who was the harriers' number one runner, achieved the second best time in the state this season of 12:05.

The signs point the way toward another Trojan victory as sophomore reserves Bob Curtis and Mike Ausderon keep in stride. The pair led the reserve squad to a very impressive record this season.

Entering the finish gate during sectionals is sophomore Tim Lee. As the number two Trojan, Tim earned one of the best sophomore times recorded in the state this year. He was the first Elmhurst runner to finish in Sectionals.

Junior Bob Levy finishes during Sectionals at Shaoff Park. Bob earned his letter and held the number three position consistently as a first year harrier.

Boyer, Emmons, Freeman Take Carmel Tourney

Spirit. Elmhurst wrestling spirit. The Trojan Takedowns at every meet. The wrestling banquet, the wrestling parties. Dave Boyer to State. Spirit. Elmhurst wrestling spirit.

Coached by Jim Welbarn, the wrestling team worked hard during the season to keep Elmhurst among the top city wrestling teams. With the completion of the new locker room and practice facilities, practice was easier to organize leaving more time for drills.

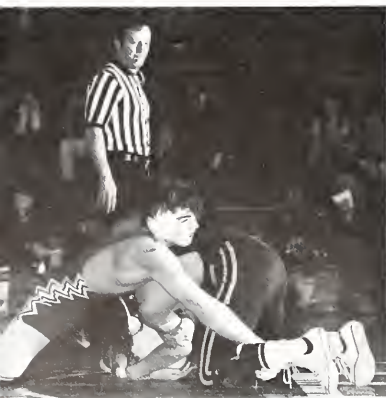

Leading the team were many outstanding wrestlers. At the Carmel tourney, Terry Emmons, Tim Freeman, and Dave Boyer won their respective weight classes. Tim and Dave went on to win sectionals and Dave, who was voted most valuable wrestler, took regionals in his class.

The season ended with the usual wrestling banquet. After months of staying within your weight, all the food you can eat.

Exhausted after a grueling match, senior Dave Boyer is determined the victor. Besides winning his regional match and advancing to the state level, Dave had the quickest pin of the season, 16 seconds.

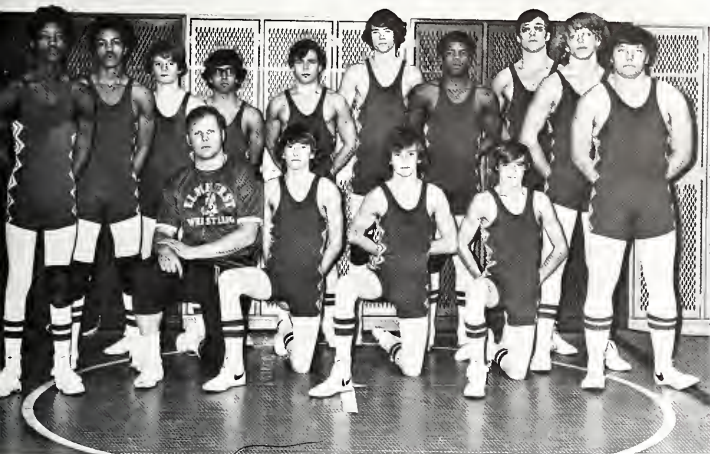

Avoiding a shoot, senior Terry Emmons hooks and prepares to lean on and control his opponent. This year Terry and Tim Freeman participated in the most varsity matches, 24.

Senior Bill Frank seems to have his opponent under control. Bill, along with Terry Emmons, led the team this year in most reversals, 25.

Senior Tim Freeman maneuvers to free himself from the grasp of his opponent. Tim, who also won his sectional, added the most team points for the season, 91.

Almond Finishes 11-0, Leads Reserves

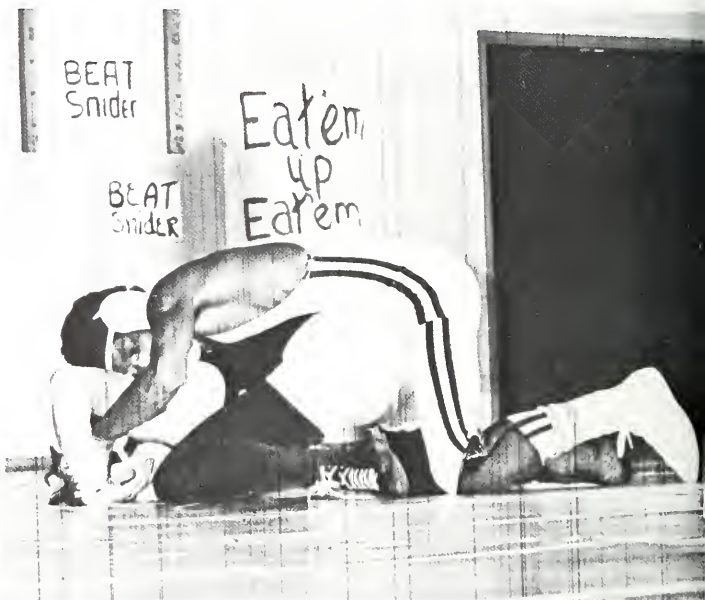

This year the reserve team, coached by Jim Lambert, won 10 of their meets, lost only to Snider and tied once with Northrop.

In the course of the season the reserves participated in numerous tourneys. Sophomore Jeff Shifflett took first in the 185 pound class of the Elmhurst Takedown Tourney. Winners of the North Side Reserve Tourney were sophomore Dave Kessel in the 126 pound class, sophomore Nelson Almond in the 145 pound class, and senior Gary Imel in the heavyweight division.

Accumulating the most pins for the reserves was sophomore Nelson Almond with five. Sophomores Dave Kessel, Paul Meredith and junior Bruce Marks each totaled four pins for the season.

Putting the half-nelson on his Snider opponent, junior Paul Freeman shoves forward to force him to the mat. Snider was the only team to beat the reserves during the season.

Just missing the pin, sophomore Nelson Almond keeps his opponent's shoulders to the mat. Nelson, who had five pins for the season, helped the reserve team greatly as his 11-0 final record shows.

Standing quickly from the down position, sophomore Dan Heckley attempts and nearly completes a reversal on his Hamestead opponent. Dan's individual record was 9-2.

Providing the speed and a lot of the points for the team were Larry and Raymond Reese. Both Larry and Raymond made the all-SAC team. Ray led the city in scoring, totaling 429 points for the season.

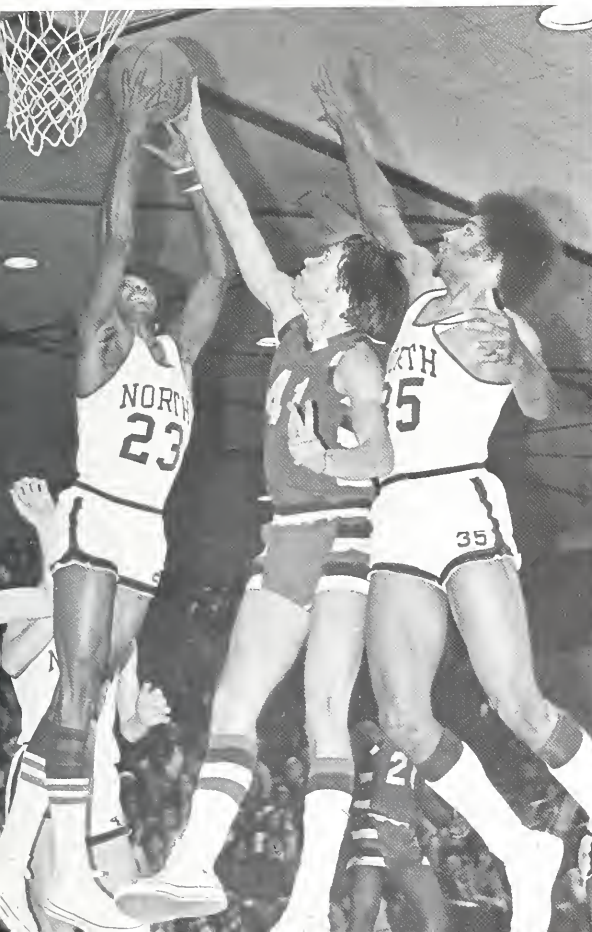

When asked after the first loss at the beginning of the season how the team would do Coach Eytcheson said, "They're young and small, but they've got the ability." The "young, small" basketball team realized this when they started the season. They ended with a 17-4 record, number one in the city.

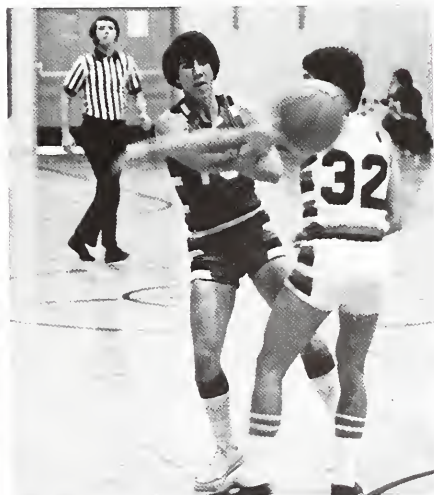

Led by the Reese brothers, Elmhurst effectively used a fast break offense against their opponents this season. More than once underrated Elmhurst emerged as the winner.

This year three Trojans made the all-SAC team, seniors Larry Reese and Ray Reese, and sophomore Ernie Starks. Ray led the whale city in scoring and won the most valuable team player award for the year.

Leaping above all other rebounders, sophomore center Ernie Starks pulls the ball down away from the crowd. Ernie made the all-SAC team this year and led the team in total rebounds with 223.

Blocking his North Side opponent's shot, senior forward Keith Bradtmiller gets a clean hand on the ball. Hitting 66 out of 139 shots for .475 percent from the floor, Keith's field goal percentage was the best on the team.

Sneaking a pass under the arm of his opponent is senior guard Lyle Howard. As the 6th man, Lyle proved a good backup man for the team.

Brewer, Whitson Lead

With many players rotating between the sophomore and reserve teams this year and nearly everyone playing every game, much skill and experience was gained in their time and effort.

Coached by Phil Hobegger, the reserve team was led in rebounding by sophomore Mike Brewer. As a center, Mike also led the team in scoring with 190 points. The reserves ended their season with a 12-8 record.

Mr. Hobegger also devoted time to coaching the sophomore team. Totaling 85 points, sophomore center Ron Whitson led the team in scoring. Losing only to Wayne and South Side, the sophomore squad ended their season with a 7-2 record.

Driving around his Luers opponent is sophomore Brian Russell. Brian was the third highest scorer on the team totaling 99 points for the season.

Beating his opponent, sophomore reserve guard Ken Coker drives in for the easy two.

Going in position on his Concordia opponent, sophomore forward Doug Peters is fouled while pulling down the rebound for the reserve squad.

Heiney Takes All Around Third at Sectionals

Concentration, coordination, and dedication are just a few of the skills needed to perform in gymnastics competition, no matter what sex. The sports scene is no longer dominated by males, and this year's girls' gymnastics team at EHS has proven that.

The team has improved greatly from last year. This year sophomore Karyn Heiney placed third in all around competition in sectionals, and fifth in vaulting on the regional level. She was later voted most valuable competitor by her teammates.

Girls earning their varsity letters this year were Cindy Bradtmiller, Betty and Bonnie Corrian, Karyn Heiney, Cindy Kratzert, Lori McCleneghen, Denise Stein, Katy Young, Nina Marchese and Debbie Janson.

A necessary part of the team, senior managers Barb Bowen and Marie Zacher helped during practice and with preparation for meets. Both were awarded manager letters for their work.

Performing on the vault, sophomore Karyn Heiney exhibits the form that won her a second at sectionals and advanced her to regionals. Karyn's previous gymnastics experience added greatly to Elmhurst's optional level.

Junior Cindy Kratzert executes a layout squat on the vault. Besides vaulting, Cindy also performed in the floor exercise.

With complete concentration, senior Denise Stein executes a seat circle on the unevens in near perfect form. Denise has been with the team for two years, working primarily on the bars and balance beam.

Performing on the balance beam, which is her specialty, sophomore Sheril Hornberger begins her dismount. Sheril also worked in floor exercise at the beginning level.

Performing her own routine in the floor exercise is senior Bonnie Corrian. Besides the floor exercise, Bonnie also competed in vaulting and on the balance beam at the optional level.

Girls Track Sixth At State Meet

Just beginning this year, the girls' basketball and track teams started out slow but produced many talented players.

Coached by Mrs. Lucy Doswell, and assisted by student teacher Miss Dianna Mankey, the entire starting five lettered during the season. They were sophomore Kelly Auer, senior Sally Hinton, junior Carol Quance, junior Ethel Fowlkes, and junior Marilynn Scherer.

The track team, coached by Mrs. Katherine Russell, was small but also contained talent.

After a long and disappointing season, the team advanced two to regionals, and then to state. With a superb end-of-the-year effort, sophomore hurdler Angie Hayden and sophomore long jumper Emma Bostic each took third in their events. This placed Elmhurst sixth at state.

Handing off the baton after her leg of the 440 yard relay is sophomore Angie Hayden. Angie, who also ran the hurdles and high jumped, was voted most valuable competitor by her teammates.

Trojans Involved in Outside Sports

Sports takes in a wide variety of activities, and it's virtually impossible for a high school to offer many popular sports.

Many Elmhurst students participate in sports outside of school, such as swimming, hockey, karate, bowling, and motocross, to name a few.

Junior Kevin Lee first began bowling at age 9. Kevin consistently bowls in the 160-200 range.

Juniors Jim McCleneghen, Putter Frebel and Mark McNamara swim competitively the whole year round.

Senior Kanda Miller holds first place in the NFAA (National Freestyle Archery Association).

Juniors Titus Underwood, Greg Gordon, Fred Underwood, Gary Curry, Jay Woods, Tim Johnson, and seniors Bobby Wattle and Eric Gordon won the YMCA basketball state championship for the Kiwanis Branch.

Junior Jon Russo started roller skating when he was 7 years old, but gave it up for ice skating when he moved to Fort Wayne. Jan has competed many times on the national level in figure skating events.

Junior Mark Hershberger has competed in motorcycle racing for the past three years, and has amassed many trophies for his efforts.

Senior Joe Langmeyer likes to fly kites, but he doesn't do it from the ground. Joe's sport is called parakiting. It's very similar to the sport of parachuting, except that Joe takes off from the ground instead of jumping from a plane as in parachuting.

Exhibiting the form that won her the NFAA championship, senior Kanda Miller takes aim.

ictured is the Kiwanis Branch YMCA basketball team. The Kiwanis branch won the state championship, defeating Falls Creek in the title game.

Countless hours of practicing make skating seem effortless for junior Jon Russo. Jon has repeatedly placed very high in competition on various national levels.

Junior Mark Hershberger takes a jump during a motocross race at Avilla, Indiana. Mark races on an amateur level of competition in motocross, so as to stay eligible for High School athletics here at Elmhurst.

Trojans Take Sectionals, Smith All-SAC

Led by Coach Bill Derbyshire and All-SAC junior Terry Smith's pitching, the Trojan baseball team took sectionals again this year, beating Columbia City 6-0 in the final game.

Leading their conference during most of the season, the team fell short of the SAC title, which was won by Dwenger, by one game. They then went on to win sectionals and all the way to the Regional finals, where the defending champs were edged out by the Bishop Luers Knights by a score of 9-5.

Junior pitcher Terry Smith won honors as the only member of the All-SAC team to be picked unanimously by the judges. Receiving honorable mention from the judges were seniors Lynn Brown, Dave Campbell, Lyle Howard, Les Sorgen and juniors Phil Gutman and Dan Landrigan.

Because of his outstanding hitting and fielding, senior Lynn Brown was voted the most valuable player award.

Making a diving catch, senior Dave Campbell tries to get the man going to first base. Dove pitched when he wasn't playing shortstop.

After tagging the base runner for the third out, junior Phil Gutman heads for the bench. Phil played second base and was a consistently good hitter for the team.

Lee First In Regionals, Runs 1.54:2 880

The track team, coached by Don Kemp and assistants Carter Lohr and David Esterline, ended the season with a 21-34 record.

A great individual effort was put forth by sophomore Tim Lee. Tim won the 880 yard run in the city title meet setting a record time of 1:55.6. This broke the existing school record by two seconds. Senior Derek Paris also set a school record in the discus, with a throw of 145 feet, 3 1/2 inches.

Senior Paul Stevens and Derek Paris were chosen as co-captains for the team during the year.

Winning the 880 relay, junior anchorman Brad Smith breaks the tape. Brad also ran the 100 yard dash during the season.

Hinton, Norton Doubles Team

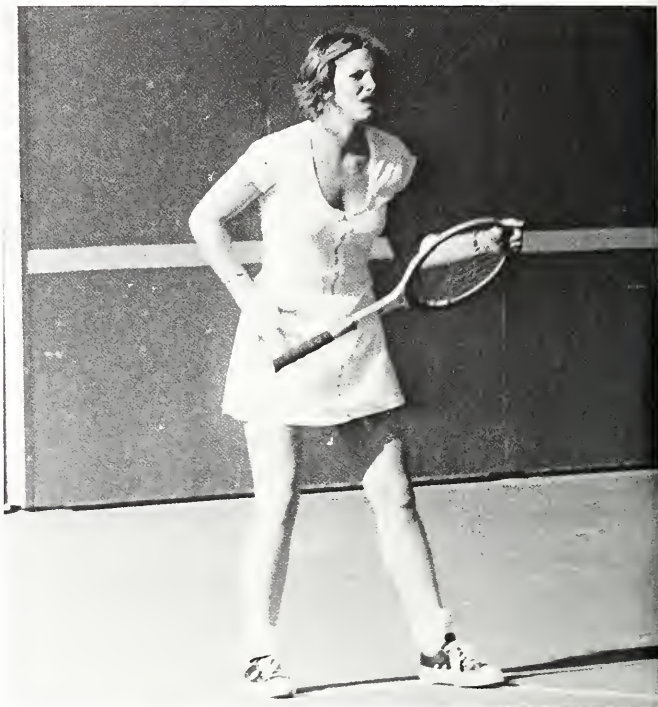

Second at Sectionals

Ending the season with no wins, the girls' tennis team had many winning players but lacked the consistency to post any team wins.

Senior Sally Hinton and junior Cheryl Norton, who both played at the first position a number of times during the season, produced many individual wins for the team. Combining for sectionals, Sally and Cheryl took second in the doubles division. Sally was voted most valuable player.

With only one senior on the squad, inexperience hindered the mostly sophomore team during the season. Few of the girls had any competitive experience in tennis before this season, although many underclass members did play strong for the team. Sophomores Leslie Collier, Robin Nebergall, Lori McCleneghen, and Karyn Heiney, along with juniors Janet Gillie and Susan Free, were each a part of the top five at one time or another.

Awaiting the serve, senior Sally Hinton rests her hand between points. Sally, who was awarded the most valuable player award, rotated with Cheryl Norton for the number one position.

Moving up after her serve, sophomore Karyn Heiney leans into her forehand shot. Karyn played third singles during the season.

Arnold Voted Most Valuable Player

Inexperience seemed to be the main problem this year as the golf team finished the season with only one win, that coming against Harding.

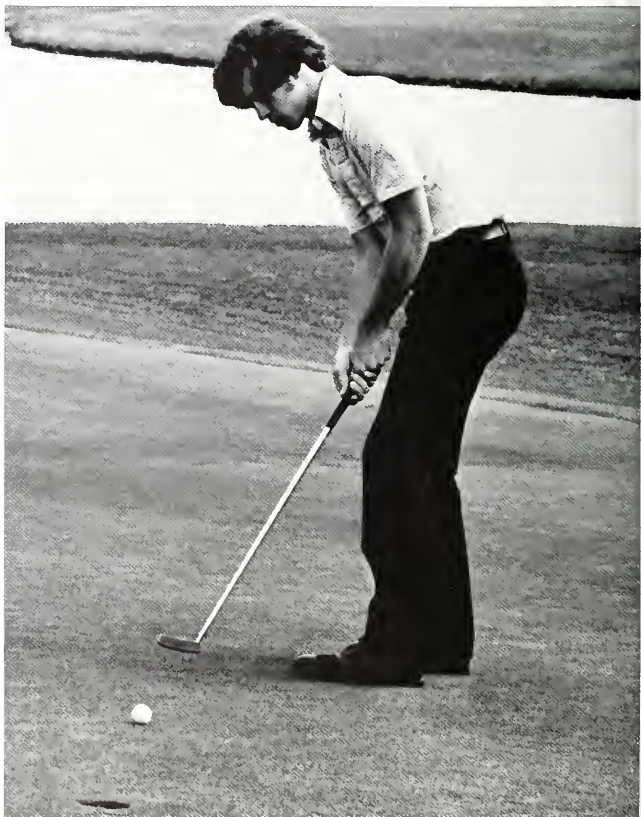

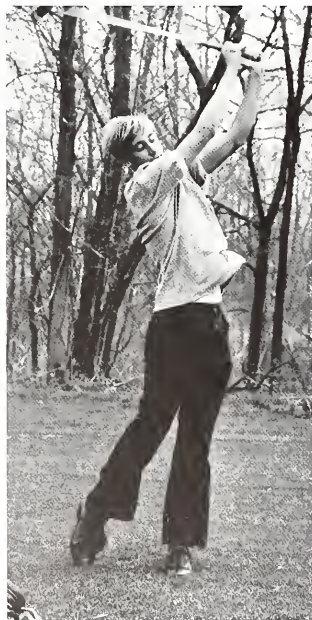

Although Coach Nick Werling tried to play everyone during the season, the team did produce four lettermen. Earning their letters were seniors Mike Arnold, George Huber, Jim Norton, and junior Jim McCleneghen.

At one time, each of the first five players played first man for the Elmhurst team, although Mike Arnold consistently led in scoring. Mike was voted the most valuable player.

Using a nine iron, senior George Huber chips the ball toward the hole. George played third man for the team this year.

Putting for par on the seventh green at Riverbend is senior Mike Arnold. Mike had a best score of 39 for nine holes during the season.

Following through with his swing, junior Jim McCleneghen uses a three wood to try to reach the green.

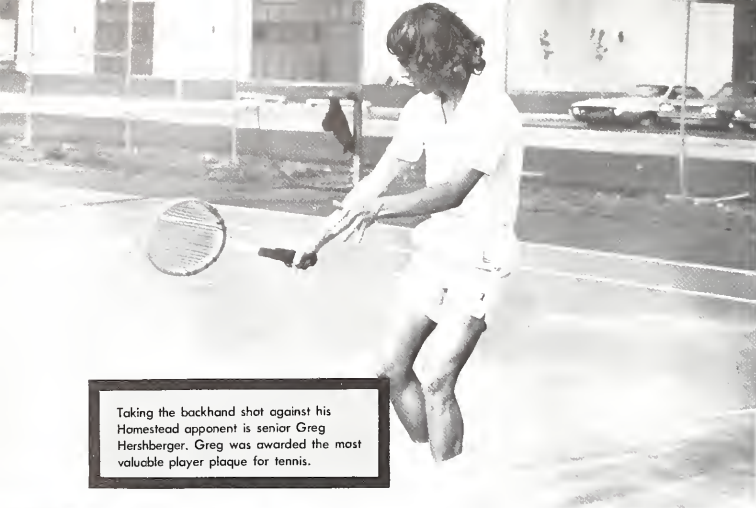

Senior Jim Norton keeps his eye on the ball after a chip shot from the fairway. Jim played second man most of the season.

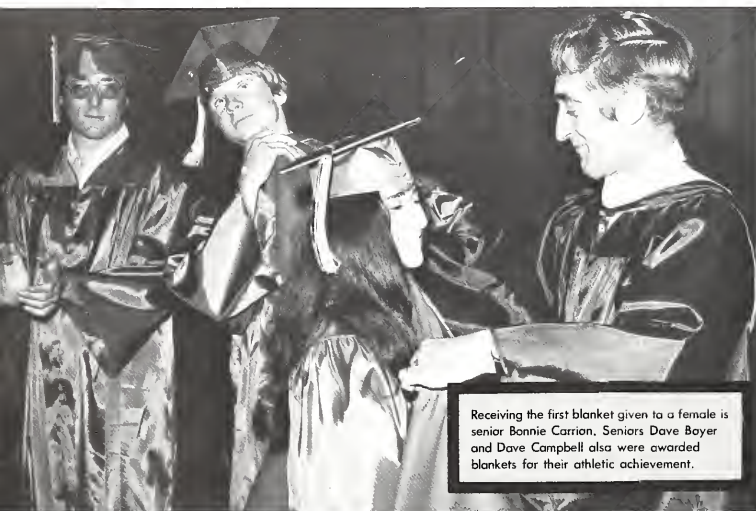

Squatting for a better view, junior Mark Newell checks the angle of the green before making the putt.

Receiving the first blanket given to a female is senior Bonnie Carrión. Seniors Dave Boyer and Dave Campbell also were awarded blankets for their athletic achievement.

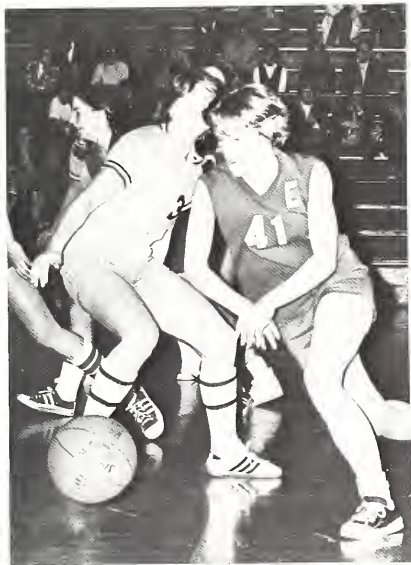

Senior Lynn Brown pitches a hard fast ball. Lynn won the most valuable award for baseball.

Campbell,

Boyer, Carrion Awarded Blankets

It was a good year. The mighty Trojans came back with many records and awards, and placed high in nearly all sports in regional competition.

With such a good season behind them, many of the coaches expressed their difficulty in choosing a most valuable player by giving more than one award. And where only one award was given, it was often a difficult choice.

Blankets were awarded to three outstanding athletes this year. Senior Bonnie Carrion received Elmhurst's first blanket given to a female. Dave Campbell and Dave Boyer also were awarded the coveted blankets.

Dave Campbell also won the Gordon Crawford Competitive Spirit Award.

Individual awards given in each sport were:

Cross Country	Most Valuable Player	Paul Stevens
Tennis	M.V.P.	Greg Hershberger

Leading the pack as he did many times during the season is senior Paul Stevens. Paul was awarded the most valuable runner award for cross country.

Senior Raymond Reese takes a shot from the corner. Ray was the high scorer in the SAC and was voted most valuable basketball player on the Trojan team.

After stealing the ball, senior Sally Hinton heads down court. Sally took most valuable honors in both girls' basketball and girls' tennis.

Volleyball Produces Eight Lettermen

Run, dig, dive and roll, setup, and spike the ball. Volleyball, right? Girls' volleyball. But the ball didn't quite go over the net enough for the Elmhurst team this year as they finished their second season in the sport with a poor final record of 1-10.

The team, coached by Mrs. Catherine Russell, had several good players as many letters were given at the end of the season but the team play needed for volleyball wasn't there. Girls who lettered this year were Sally Hinton, Cindy Krouse, Carol Quance, Deedee Whitman, Betty Corrian, Bonnie Corrian, Marty Kelly, and Cindy Ybarra.

"Even though we lost most of our games," stated junior Carol Quance, "I really enjoyed having the chance to participate in a sport and meet people from other schools. Most of the time, girls can only watch."

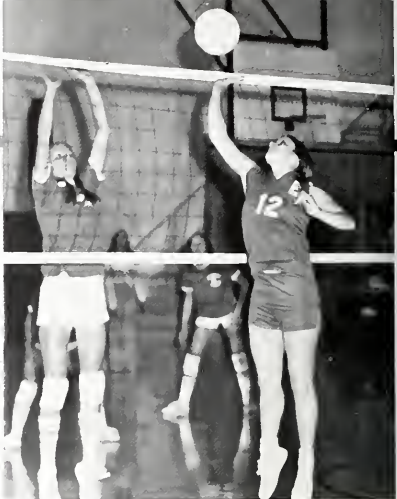

Senior Sally Hinton was voted the most valuable player for the season.

Leaping high, senior Deedee Whitman prepares to spike the ball past her Northrap opponents. Deedee won her letter this year in volleyball.

Digging a deep shot, senior Marty Kelly labs the ball to the front line for the setup and spike. Marty, along with Bonnie Corrian, Betty Corrian, and Cindy Ybarra, received her second letter in volleyball this year.

Blocking the spike, senior Sally Hinton deflects the ball into the air to allow her teammates an easier return. Sally played well for the team as she lettered in this, her first year in the sport.

Returning a deep valley, senior Bonnie Carrion sends the ball up to the front row. Bonnie and her sister Betty were two of the eight girls who lettered during the season.

Trying to return senior Marty Kelly's save, senior Deedee Whitman digs the ball as it flies from the net.

Coach Involvement Brings Satisfaction

Run, sweat, jump, worry, then worry some more. A coach leads a rough life. Hours of work and responsibility just to push a bunch of clowns through a season doesn't seem worth it, but there is satisfaction. Satisfaction of winning. Satisfaction of beating that coach that beat you last year.

Involvement is important in coaching. A coach must relate with his team, and the team must relate with the coach. Involvement is Coach Bill Derbyshire hitting same grounders to warm up the team, and Coach Morty Burns doing routines with the girls. And how many times, if at all, during a wrestling match do you see Coach Jim Welborn sitting down?

A coach works all year round to make the season a winning one. This year, with help from the coaches, Elmhurst proved itself as one of Fort Waynes athletic powers. Here's to you, coaches, you did a great job.

Aiding an injured wrestler, Coach Jim Welborn calls for the assistance of a manager. Mr. Welborn is also an assistant football coach during the fall.

Discussing their views on the next race are head cross country coach Carter Lohr and assistant coach Dave Esterline. Both coaches also devote their time in the spring as assistant track coaches.

During an away game, head basketball coach Ken Eytcheson along with assistants John Bunnell and Phil Hobegger go over an important part of the full court press.

Girls gymnastics coach Marty Burns explains the scoring of the last event to Robin Browning during a lull in the competition. When not coaching gymnastics for Elmhurst and other schools, Mrs. Burns teaches physical education to handicapped children.

Shouting out last minute instructions, head football coach Tom Herman sees to it that the defense is ready. Coach Herman gained recognition in his first year at Elmhurst for leading his team to a tie in the south division of the SAC.

SUN SHINES, KIDS CUT UP FRISBEES FLY,

Seniors Spend Day at Franke Park

Seniors' last day began with a breakfast, followed by an assembly with the reading of the class will and prophecy. Then it was off to Franke Park for an all-day picnic—a combination of joy, relief, and a lump in the throat when good-byes were said to life-long friends, mixed with food and frisbees. As the day ended, Franke Park was filled with many unforgettable moments.

THE OLD CAP AND GOWN' ROUTINE PACKS THE HALL

Opening Night

After a last run-through to polish up the act, the seniors showed up half an hour before showtime in costume. The farewell performance went smoothly with no forgotten lines or stumbled entrances. The cast parties that followed topped off the evening and marked another opening curtain for many.

Rowdy Times and Mellow

All the time we spent in school wasn't always spent with a crowd of kids or in a classroom. At times it was with someone special, whether it was a girlfriend or a boyfriend . . . or just by yourself looking for a party or tooling around.

Other times it was rowdy and always going, like in the ninth mad lunchroom with milk cartons flying and peas flipping and Mrs. Stoight reprimanding everyone in sight.

MELLOW OUT—Really cooking, senior Dan Schary pounds out some heavy rhythms with the 3:00 jazz band.

IF THIS IS WHAT THE LOSER GETS, I WONDER WHAT THE WINNER GETS?—Senior Cris Cory gives senior Jim Norton some Trojan Takedown support.

TEE HEE, GIGGLE GIGGLE—With the grace of an ox and the antics of a clown, junior Dave Chrzan waltzes into room 108.

CLASS OF '75—Sitting in the band room, this trophy was presented to Mr. Brugh by the senior class. It represents "toilet," "lizard," and "left turn," phrases remembered well by band members.

SUN WORSHIPERS—Taking in some sun, senior Denise Stein, juniors Debbie Redman, Ann Momper, Melissa Hunter, and Marty Grass of the Diamond Devils support the baseball team.

I know that you believe you understand what you think I said,
but I am not sure you realize that what you heard is not what I meant.

Nixon

"AND THE HEART IS AROUND HERE" . . . Amused, senior Larry Gonzales gives his quarterly biology report.

SAY THAT AGAIN—This thought provoking poster hangs in Mr. Joe Miller's room.

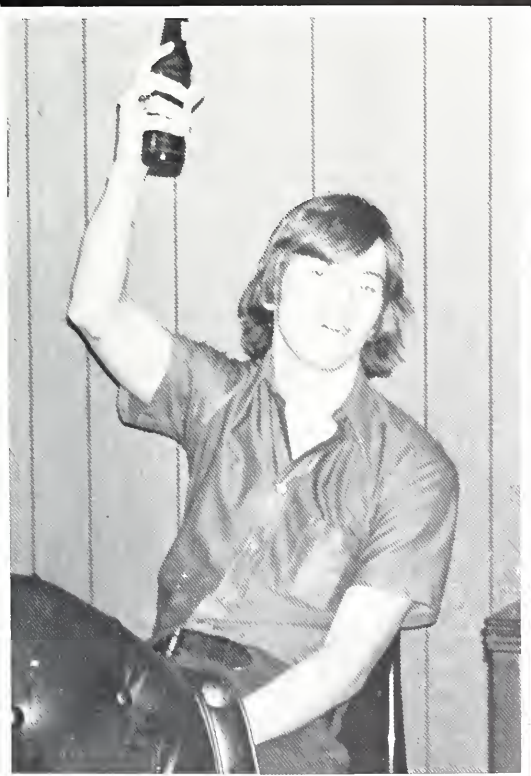

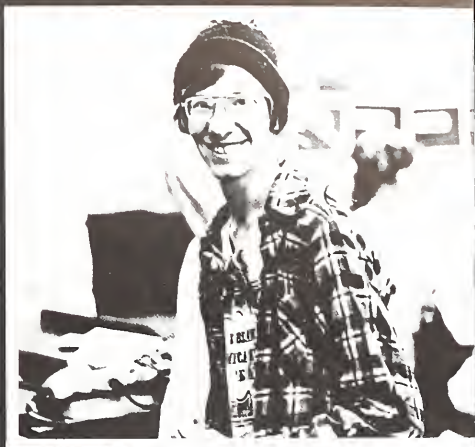

"WE LOVE YOU, RAYMOND"—With screams and cheers, sophomore Raymond Walker falls to the floor beneath many endearing fans.

ONE FOR ALL, ALL FOR ONE—Junior Carol Quance and seniors Denise Stein, Mary Roop and Nancy Raney scrounge the halls together.

EXPRESSION—Junior Melissa Hunter catches someone's eye in the lunchroom.

"OH DARLING, IT'S THE LATEST THING"—On a spirited dress-down day, junior Mike Mourai sports his own fashionable outfit.

WHAT A CHARMER—Watched by junior Pat Tyson, junior Matt Cary flashes a sly glance at the camera at the underclass honors reception.

"CHEERS, TO MY FRIENDS"—Proposing a toast, senior Phil Rockstroh raises his bottle.

A Chosen Few: Friends That Remember

Throughout the year there have been things that everyone or maybe only a few will remember. I mean, who will ever forget something as regular as pizza, corn, donuts, and orange juice on Wednesdays, or junior Claudia Johnson coming over the public address to promote the prom and concerts with her novelty voice and script, "Dear Thelma . . ."

A certain language class got their special privileges by visiting a "tortilla factory." And a certain physics class will remember Barb Bowen's chao-choo, a special gift reminded of by her friends.

Envy by others, science classes took those interesting and always educating trips to the filtration plants and outside to observe natural settings.

A chosen few recall birthday parties, held in the cafeteria, that friends gave them showing that they remembered.

After school, a disease broke out that spread through the brains of many. It was incurable and highly contagious. Eucheritis, or better known as just euchre. The disease spread throughout the sophomore, junior and senior classes and many eyes grew blood-shot from staying up and playing it.

MUSIC MAKER—Set up in the cafeteria, senior Angela Gensic practices the organ for future bonquets.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT—Caged in chicken wire, senior Keith Broadmiller directs others in making the senior Homecoming float.

EXPERIMENT IN MUD—Junior Jan Russa throws a pot on the wheel.

"DO I WANT TO BE A NURSE OR AN ELECTRICIAN"—During college day, seniors Cathy Cory, Marie Zacher, and Kathy Clarke face all the opportunities of colleges and jobs.

TIP TOE THROUGH THE TULIPS—Scoring two, Mr. David Esterline is watched closely by sophomore Ernie Starks and Mordy Beckman.

The years seem to go by and though there are changes, they're really pretty much the same . . . the deadlines, the chaos and the togetherness never change.

We changed companies—again—this year and we would like to extend a special thanks to Mr. Steve Schmidt and Paragon yearbooks. We stayed with Root Photographers and thanks to our old friends, Mr. Dick Ware and Mr. Ray Dobbs, for staying with us and putting up with bad times and good.

Outside of school, Mr. Virgil Marquart, a professional photographer, allowed us to use a picture of his on page 5.

As everywhere yearbooks are having trouble financially and we are grateful to Mr. Richard Horstmeyer for helping us along.

On another financial note, our thanks to our advertisers, old and new, for supporting us and believing in us.

We would like to thank our subscribers without whom this book wouldn't be possible and who we're sure have enjoyed this book and will enjoy it more in years to come.

This year was different because our staff was so experienced. Out of our entire staff, only a few will be returning. The pages of this yearbook reflect this. So we extend our deepest appreciation to our staff and our photographers. There is a staff picture but it doesn't picture those miscellaneous people who typed or did whatever was needed. Thank you.

And last but not least to our advisor who has and probably always will put up with our endless chaos and shenanigans . . . Mrs. Hoylman.

*Thank you
Hally Miller
Cathy Cary*

All emotions of a student body could hardly be piled onto one book but looking back over it, one can see that the people of 1974-75's yearbook staff have attempted to do just that. Catching a smile of triumph or a frown of disappointment was the major objective. Even though many of our teams weren't outstanding, each of us realized how much work was put into sports and how much of this energy went unrecognized and unappreciated. Girlfriends and sisters knew how much and the coaches who made the work knew it.

We've tried to capture the dedication of the bands whether the band members were sophomores or hardcore veterans. They marched for hours through summer and fall in those ugly hot uniforms. And jazz band, those crazy people who practiced till their fingers were dead, and then they practiced some more. Those music people proved they were best in city and in state.

If there could be a prize for the rowdiest room in the school, it would have to go to the publications room with walls shaking and people screaming so loud you couldn't hear yourself think and learning new four-letter words every day, always testing your endurance till another deadline was over.

For all those people who worked in school and outside in jobs and on projects for someone else, hopefully they will be remembered with thoughts of thanks.

And always you wonder which class was the most involved, or which had the best looking girls or guys. And to the senior the sophomores seemed to get littler and littler every year.

Well, the end of the year is here and it means something different to everyone. For the sophomores it's just the beginning. They know most of the ins and outs. They've transformed from rowdy, inexperienced sophs into mellowed-out juniors. For the juniors it's like coming to the crest of a hill. They've come this far and those that didn't make it are gone. They shed their shells and spread their wings and became SENIORS. For the seniors it's graduation and all night parties and tears and celebrating.

When you look back over these pages to see who gained or who lost it or to see friends or look up someone's forgotten name or just remember, look at each picture and remember each with love.
